SWIMMER CHOKES TO DEATH

EX-SECRETARY OF WAR WEEKS DIES

Today

Coue Is Dead.
Rothschild, Mere Piker.
G. F. Baker's Vacation.
Billionaire Quadruplets.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Copyright, 1926, by the Star Co.

DR. COUE is dead. Every day, in every way, nature's laws work ceaselessly, remorselessly. Parts wear out, in men, as in motors, and no one sells new parts for men.

Merely saying that you are better, in every way, does not make you better; you must do something. But Coue made men imagine that they were getting better, and imagination, which is nine-tenths of life, is the next best thing to reality.

Nature's way is still mysterious to us, as when Bacon, in his "History of Life and Death," marveled at the working of fire.

How this clay is hardened, and how this wax is melted, with one and the same thing, fire?

It drieth earth, stones, wood, cloth and skins, and whatsoever is not liquefiable; and it melteth metals, wax, gums, butter, tallow and the like.

BARON MAURICE DE ROTHSCHILD, of the great international banking family, is deprived of his seat in the French senate, because he spent 1,600,000 francs to get it. There is no suggestion of corruption, but the French decide that 1,600,000 francs is too much.

The French are fussy. One million six hundred thousand francs amounts, in what we call real money, to less than $45,000. Think of insulting the honest political workers of Pennsylvania with that sum.

GEORGE F. BAKER, believed by many to be included in the United States set of billionaire quadruplets—Rockefeller, Mellon, Ford and Baker—Knows how to enjoy life at 86. Sailing for Europe, he gives to each of the employes in his First National bank a present of one year's salary. The total gift, $300,000, is called by Mr. Baker "a selfish gift," his theory being that you enjoy your own vacation more thoroughly, if you know that others are enjoying themselves.

That is better than the old Puritan idea. They believe that the blessed in Heaven were permitted to look down upon the damned, writhing in

Swimming Is Ideal Exercise

Swimming is the most perfect exercise from the standpoint of its health-promoting value.

It stimulates the circulation of the blood, brings practically every large muscle into harmonious play, and develops fine healthy lungs.

If you can not swim you are missing one of the most valuable and enjoyable sports.

DEATH CLAIMS MEMBER OF TWO CABINETS AT LANCASTER, N. H.

End Came With Family at His Bedside.

66 YEARS OLD

Served at Washington Under Harding and Coolidge.

LANCASTER, N. H., July 12—John W. Weeks, former secretary of war under Presidents Harding and Coolidge, died at his summer home, Mt. Prospect, here, early today. He was 66 years old.

Tumor on Brain.

The end came with his family at the bedside fully prepared for death in view of a bulletin issued by attending physicians late Sunday stating that the former cabinet member could not survive another 24 hours.

Gathered around the bedside when the end came were Mrs. Weeks, their son, Sinclair Weeks and Mrs. Sinclair Weeks, and Mr. and Mrs. John W. Partidge of Washington, son-in-law and daughter.

The former war secretary never fully recovered from the illness that compelled him to resign from the cabinet and two weeks ago he took to his bed for the last time with what was announced as a tumor on an artery in the brain. His condition became critical last Wednesday and several days ago he lapsed into a coma.

In Many Walks of Life.

The former cabinet officer trod many walks of life in his crowded 66 years, having been a farm boy in New Hampshire, district school teacher, naval midshipman, surveyor in Florida, member of a prominent stock brokerage firm, Massachusetts alderman, mayor, congressman, United States senator, republican party leader and finally secretary of war.

Like President Coolidge, Mr. Weeks was a country boy from the rugged hills of northern New England. He was born in April, 1860, on his father's little New Hampshire farm near here. His father, William D. Weeks, was a Leonard Brindley, husband of Mrs. Adeline Brindley; Mrs. Fannie Brindley, his mother; Rose Brindley, sister; Dale Brindley, son, and Miss Bernice Kuntz.

According to information received by East Liverpool friends of the Brindley family, the accident occurred when the automobile in which they were riding was struck and overturned by another car. The party was returning home from a week's visit with relatives at Mt. Clemens, Mich.

Others who sustained minor injuries were Leonard Brindley, driver, and his 2 year-old son, Dale; his sister, Miss Rose Brindley, and niece, Bernice Kountz, 11 years old, of McKinnon avenue.

First news of the accident was in the form of a telegram received by Mrs. Fred A. Smith, McKinnon avenue, a neighbor of the Brindley family, yesterday afternoon. Harry Brindley, a brother of Leonard Brindley, later verified the information in a telephone conversation with his brother at the Ashland hospital.

The Brindley family left Mt. Clemens early Sunday morning. The motorist, alleged to have been responsible for the accident, failed to stop. The Brindley car, an Oakland sedan, was badly damaged.

DOMINIC PREZZIA, 20, STRANGLES AS HE EATS ORANGE IN PARK POOL

Wellsville Grocer's Son is Found Dead in Seven Feet of Water at Rock Springs After Jumping From Concrete Wall While Bathing Sunday Afternoon.

JOHN BROMBY AND C. E. HECKERT, LIFEGUARD, RECOVER LAD'S BODY

Physician, Using Pulmotor, Works Nearly Two Hours, But Fails to Resuscitate Man Whose Throat is Found Clogged With Food—"Suffocation" is Verdict.

Dominic Prezzia, 20, Wellsburg, W. Va., pool room operator, strangled to death upon a piece of an orange which became lodged in his throat while bathing in the Rock Springs park pool, Chester, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Prezzia's body, standing up-right in about seven feet of water, was recovered by John Bromby, East Liverpool, another bather and C. E. Heckert, Chester, life guard at the pool, a few minutes after the swimmer disappeared. Dr. Charles R. Campbell, Chester, with a pulmotor worked over the victim's body nearly two hours in an effort to resuscitate him but in vain.

At an inquest conducted by Coroner George Arner of Hancock county, W. Va., at the Arner undertaking establishment, Chester, last evening a verdict of "suffocation" was returned. The victim's lungs were found empty of water and his throat clogged with food, indicating he choked to death.

Prezzia, who was manager of a pool room in Wellsburg, owned by his father, Charles Prezzia, grocer at Thirteenth and Commerce streets, Wellsville, was spending the week-end with his parents. He and three companions had gone to the park for a swim.

Girls Discover Tragedy.

Prezzia, who was able to swim, had crossed the pool about 50 feet north of the south end, while his three friends were jumping from the diving board. Friends said he had been eating an orange while sitting on the wall on the west side of the pool before he plunged into the water.

Misses Violet Vorndran and Beatrice Freymark, East Liverpool, who were also sitting on the wall about 10 feet from where Prezzia disappeared, noticed the peculiar position of the youth's body under the water, and screamed for help.

The body was recovered and removed to the steps on the upper side of the pool about two minutes later. Dr. W. D. Graham, Pittsburgh, who was nearby when the body was recovered, attempted to resuscitate Prezzia while a call was sent to the Chester mill for a pulmotor. Dr. Campbell arrived a few minutes later.

The body was removed to the Arner morgue in the Arner ambulance.

Prezzia is survived by his parents and two brothers and four sisters, as follows: Philip, Betty, Virginia, Rose, Anna and John.

Charles Carraher Fined $50, Sent To County Jail

Charles Carraher was fined $50 and costs upon an intoxication charge by Municipal Judge Hanley this morning and ordered committed to the county jail until the fine and costs are paid.

Carraher, who was only recently released from the county jail, was arrested about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after he is alleged to have looted the home of W. M. Hill, Third and College streets. Robert Harker, Newell, noticed Carraher leaving the Hill home with a bag. He stopped him, and opening the bag found it filled with dishes, an alarm clock and other household furnishings.

Harker detained Carraher until Patrolman Haley arrived to take him to jail. Hill, who left town on a fishing trip this morning, refused to charge the prisoner with larceny.

Carl Laemmle Slightly Improved.

LONDON, July 12.—The condition of Carl Laemmle, American motion picture producer, appendicitis victim, was slightly better this morning, physicians announced.

VAUGHN FLEES FROM JAILER

East Liverpool Youth Escapes From Beaver Road Gang.

Charles Vaughn, 22, East Liverpool youth, under a six months sentence for transporting liquor in Beaver county, made his escape from a road gang, working south of Beaver, Pa., Saturday afternoon, police were advised today.

Vaughn, a "trusty", fled while the foreman's attention was directed to another part of the job.

A search was instituted bu the prisoner could not be found.

The fugitive, a son of Mrs. Agnes Vaughn who recently completed a term in Beaver county also for a liquor violation, had served about four months of his six-month sentence. Officials at the Beaver jail said that he would have been liberated within about 30 days. If recaptured, he will be returned to Beaver to serve the balance of his jail term.

Vaughn's fine of $100, imposed by the court at the time that he entered a plea of guilty, is also unpaid. His automobile was sold upon order of the court.

Motorist Denies He Drove Through Red Traffic Block

Entering a plea of not guilty to the charge of violating the traffic ordinance by driving through a red block, B. L. Smith, Wellsville, was held for a hearing before Municipal Judge J. C. Hanley, this afternoon, upon arraignment this morning. Smith was arrested last evening at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway by Captain of Police Conley.

Kenneth Bell, Wellsville, was fined $2 and costs upon a charge of speeding along West Eighth street. Bell was arrested by Special Patrolman Curran at 8 o'clock Saturday night while traveling 40 miles an hour, according to Curran.

18 KNOWN DEAD, BETWEEN 20 AND 30 OTHERS BELIEVED KILLED, 200 INJURED AND $100,000,000 DAMAGE IN NAVAL DEPOT BLAST

By DAVID SENTNER.

DOVER, N. J., July 12. — Sixteen bodies had been recovered from the devastated region between the army base at Picatinny and the naval reservation at Lake Denmark, N. J., today up to 1 o'clock.

The total number of known dead is eighteen. One body was recovered yesterday and a woman victim of the great explosion died in the hospital.

Twenty or more persons are still missing. Damage was estimated at $100,000,000 but some officials believed that the loss might run higher, in view of the widespread property damage.

The list of injured probably will reach hundreds. Preliminary estimates place the total at more than 200.

Among the persons first listed as missing who have been located are Lieut. Commander Brown of Poughkeepsie, and Capt. B. H. Clark of Little Rock, Ark.

This morning 218 United States marines arrived from Quantico, Va., and prepared to enter the danger zone in search for the dead and missing. All Saturday night and Sunday whistling 14-inch and 16-inch shells have been shooting forth and looping about from the burning ruins of the arsenal.

Fearing further explosions, naval officials and other investigators have kept back on the rim of a rough circle drawn about a two-mile radius of Lake Denmark. To enter that "deadline" would have been suicide. For that reason it has been impossible to obtain an accurate check on the dead and missing.

Lightning Strikes Arsenal.

The first explosion occurred at 5:20 Saturday afternoon when lightning struck the arsenal. A terrific blast shook the country for 30 miles around, and throughout the night blast after blast sent terror into the hearts of people in the nearby villages who fled for their lives. Doors and windows were blown out of homes, trees swept away, and automobiles jolted from the roadways.

All day Sunday, on the wasted ground of the valley near Lake Denmark, army and navy officers, state troopers and other rescue workers cautiously made their way forward to the scene but feared to get too near because of the danger of further explosions.

Somewhere in the ruins may be some 20 or 30 service men who have not been heard from since the first explosion.

Resembles War Front.

Conservative estimates this morning placed the property damage at $100,000,000. The damage caused at the navy depot is estimated at $37,000,000. The Picatinny arsenal, a depot of army stores adjoining the naval reservation, was damaged, it is estimated, to the extent of $5,000,000.

Between $150,000 and $200,000 damage was done to the plant of the Replogle Steel company, near Mt. Hope.

Heavy damage was caused in 10 towns in Bergen, Morris and Passaic counties.

The 218 marines from Quantico were awaiting their chance to penetrate the charred, pitted district devastated by the explosions and fires. They will proceed under orders from General Hugh A. Drum.

General Drum, after inspecting the plateau of the reservation from Picatinny peak, and adjoining height, said:

"It's like a scene from the western front. It looks like ground that has been fought over. All vegetation has been swept away."

How soon the marines under Gen. Drum's direction will dare enter the smouldering ruins was a matter of conjecture, although the marines were ready to go at a moment' notice. Some think they will enter the danger zone this morning, some think several days and others at least a week.

Hundreds of Houses in Ruins

The loss of life necessarily will remain a matter of conjecture until it is possible to explore the blackened ruins.

Hundreds of houses in villages near the scene are just masses of ruins today. Many thought an earthquake had occurred when lightning set off the first and biggest explosion Saturday afternoon.

Since then the explosions have been intermittent.

Huge Shells, cans of T. N. T., depth bombs and cases of powder have shot up into the sky in ominous pyrotechnical display.

Shells were still exploding this morning. The marines were held back

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Bee and Lou are modern girls sharing a Greenwich Village apartment. Bee is an actress, at present in the chorus, but keeping a stiff upper lip and a fond hope of success. Into the Village comes Delia, frail poetess of New England, seeking freedom from the repressions of her home. And Bee, a school chum of the freedom-seeker, invites her to share their apartment. Delia is determined to win through to the freedom she came for. Before the first evening is well under way Delia has met Wilbur, a young artist who is suffering from "too much mother" and whom Lou has undertaken to rescue; and Leslie, intimate of Lou; and Arthur Rockwell the poet whose work Delia knows and admires; and various others of the Village crowd. For there is a gay party in the little apartment. As the festivities break up Leslie, frankly in love with Lou, protests on her putting Wilbur up at her apartment. She holds to her decision to keep the young artist under guard. The next morning the girls awake with a "morning after the night before" feeling. During a conversation with the other two, Delia learns that Arthur, who has taken a fancy to her, is unscrupulous. Yet she persists in yielding to his fascinations. In the afternoon, by appointment, she goes to his rooms in the village.

Bee, meanwhile, meets Fred, a young and successful business man who has ben urging her to marry him. He fairly pleads with her, but she has her own ideas about marriage which do not conform to Fred's.

CHAPTER TWELVE.

"I mustn't forget what really brought me here, Fred," said Bee. "You see, an old college chum of mine, Delia Bradley, turned up yesterday. I've got to find a job for her. I know it's a nuisance to bother you about a thing like that, but I must break through with it somewhere. Secretarial work. Plenty of experience up in Worcester. A college education. Publishes verse in good magazines. A dreamer, but intelligent. Shy. Puritan inhibitions and all."

He scribbled a name on a card and tossed it across the table. "Have her see him tomorrow, Mr. Lane. Refer to me. Ought to be something for her in Aero Accessories. College education, eh! Maybe she can actually spell. Wouldn't that be great!"

"Would it?" Bee began to believe that she had headed him around nicely.

"And punctuate! Be corking if she could punctuate! You don't know the queer fruit of the business schools that we have to put up with in New York."

"I can tell you a lot more about Delia, Fred. She's really—"

He wasn't listening, but sipped a fresh glass of the wine and stared up at an exotic mural painting in greens purples, blues, yellows and chashing reds. The business was over almost before she had begun it. Delia was to see Mr. Lane. That was that.

The first thing that came into her head to say was :"Fred, aren't you—well, really drinking quite a lot?" So she said it.

But he dismissed this thought as easily and utterly as he had dismissed the little matter of Delia. "More than I used to, yes. But only after hours, never during the day. I told you I've felt reckless. That's so. Nights are the lonely time. But there's not the slightest danger of my overdoing it, if that's what's on your mind. Marry me, and I'll quit now. Say the word, Bee—" He had his glass up; she had pushed hers away. "Say you'll marry me within a year, and I'll pour this into the ice-bucket."

He watched her for a sign. She couldn't give it. "All right, then; I'll pour it into myself." Which he did.

Bee's lips drew more tightly together. She was stirred, and a little hurt, as well. She thought him not quite fair. Or was all fair?

"I've told you exactly how I feel Fred."

"No, you haven't." He was smiling a little, and slowly shaking his head. "No—you—haven't!"

"But I have, Fred! I've tried to make you see—"

"Oh, you've tried, fair enough. I'm not questioning your honesty, child. Only your intelligence."

"Well, that's rather—"

"How could you tell me exactly how you feel? That's nonsense, of course."

"It isn't nonsense, Fred."

"Certainly it is. All you've told me is what you will or wont make up your mind to do. We've had a few moderately intimate moments, you and I. You must have felt all sorts of things. I'm sure I have."

"Why, naturally, in that sense—"

"Surely you have moods."

"Of course, Fred."

"Funny business. I'd like to know what the devil it's all about. Really, I mean. We'll say I'm in love with you. I am, of course. Crazy about you. The thought of you excites me, stirs a desire to possess you. Shut you away. It's the upsetting old instinct that's put there to keep the race alive, regardless. We're nothing but victims of its ravages. We're nothing! Walk through Times Square any night and look at the faces. Thousands and thousands of 'em. Human critters. Some of 'em educated, whatever that is! Some of 'em even well-bred. But what are they thinking about? All of 'em, what are they thinking? Just one thing. She's thinking about him, and he's thinking about her. Or at least about them!"

"At least, Fred, you can understand why I wont let my life be governed by my nerve-centers—where the moods come from."

"Can you help it? Can any of us help it?"

"If I didn't think so," Bee answered, "I'd go back home tonight."

"I wonder. You folks down there in the Village seem to go about life on the basis that the individual—the little separate ego—is important."

"Isn't he?"

"I rather think not. He didn't seem very important in the war."

"Oh, the war—"

"And he doesn't seem so damn' important in business.'

'But business—"

"Business, dear Bee, is the form the human struggle for survival takes at present. It's Life. It's exactly Life."

"A pretty low form."

"Perhaps. Perhaps not. Rather a big thing to generalize about offhand. Oh,"—he lifted a firm hand,—"I know the quaint jargon of the Village. The important things are batiks and samovars and little poems."

"Art is pretty important, Fred."

"Oh, sure!"

"You can't have a civilization without it. Without the spirit of it. The final fine flower of business appears to be the Rotary."

"That's partly true—only partly. But I didn't set out really to start a silly argument, Beee. I'm groping around in my mind. Here I am, crazy about you."

"Now please, Fred—"

"Oh, don't worry. I'm thinking it out. Trying to. I've about come to the conclusion that the individual doesn't matter a damn, except as he contributes service. What's a woman's greatest gift? Isn't it mothering?"

"But Fred, this isn't 1880!"

"Well, isn't it? Mothering young citizens. Mothering a man. Isn't it the one thing she can do that a man can't? Isn't it the finest thing in life?"

Somewhat nervously Bee hummed the concluding line of a song that had amused them all—"Don't swat your mother. It's mean."

"Oh," said he, "of course all that primitive, elemental truth is laughed out of the Village. Let's say that I'm Victorian."

"Like most arguments,' she observed, interrupting him, "it appears to come down to a question of what I think and what you think. I'm sorry to say that I've got to run, Fred. I'll walk over to the subway."

"You'll do nothing of the sort."

"But, Fred, I really want the exercise."

"Nothing doing! Look here, Bee, I'm going to get down to brass tacks. I'm in a queer fix, really. Riding the big wave. Money coming easy. A big time future ahead. And yet the whole damn thing's as empty as a shell. I simply don't react to it. I'm empty, hollow. My imagination's set on a little girl that's got her mind set on fighting the world independently. Sometimes I think it may prove too much for me. I may just blow up. Thrown cheap women at you. Go to hell, maybe. I don't know."

Miniature Musical Comedy And Feature Film At Ceramic

Dancing and Good Music Offered With Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez in "Not So Long Ago."

Arthur Spizzi's "Northland Frolics," a miniature musical comedy unit, is the metropolitan attraction at the Ceramic theatre today, opening a three-day engagement with matinees.

This pretty bit of entertainment with colorful dancing and good music sets off another all-star cinema program, the feature of which is the Sidney Olcott production," "Not So Long Ago," in which Ricardo Cortez and Betty Bronson are the stars.

As an appetizer, the program includes the comedy, "Page Me" in which Bobby Vernon has the stellar role; International Newsreel and Aesop's Fables.

There is a little touch of Broadway in "Northland Frolics," featuring Cort and Cooley, an eccentric comedy male dancing team; Witt and Berg, instrumentalists; Three Lubal Girls' dancers and Virginia Webster. Miss Webster, who is a pianist and possesses a pleasing voice, has held the leading roles in the Harrisburg Civil Opera company's productions.

The story of "Not So Long Ago," adapted for the screen by Violet Clark from the Broadway stage hit of the same name by Arthur Richman, is a romantic comedy of New York in 1850. The heroine of the story (Betty Bronson) is a poor but pretty girl of a very romantic turn of mind. The daughter of an inventor, she works as seamstress in the home of the Ballards, very rich people.

Betty's desire to impress her girl friends leads her to tell them that Billy Ballard (Cortez), son and heir of her employers, is deeply in love with her. In reality, Billy doesn't know she exists. Later they meet and actually do fall in love and there are complications galore.

A feature of the production is a unique race between the first "horseless carriage" and Laurence Wheat, who plays the bragart, Sam Robinson, who is also in love with Betty. If he wins, Betty has promised to marry him. If he doesn't, it means success for her father's invention.

Ukraine Leaders Move To Part From Soviets; Controversy is Bitter

MOSCOW.—Development of a bitter controversy between Moscow and Kharkov, capital of the Ukraine, reveals evidence that no complete success has met the Soviet's attempts to solve the question of national minorities by giving autonomy to each national group.

It is now admitted that strong elements in the Ukraine are working for separation from the Soviet Union. The root of the trouble seems to be the over-developed patriotism of the Ukrainans, resulting from their sudden freedom the bonds imposed by the Russian autocracy.

THREE GAMES FOR LOCAL NINE

Play K. T. K. Today in First Clash of Second Half.

Wellsville's re-organized City Industrial Baseball league club goes into action this evening at Central park in their initial contest of the second half schedule, playing the strong K. T. K. outfit.

Not disheartened by their cellar berth in the loop at the close of the initial section of the playing schedule, the locals, under new management, expect to climb a few notches within the next few weeks and at least make some of the pace setters step.

The locals will not want for action during the inaugural week of the final drive, having been carded for no less than three contests.

On Tuesday night they will clash with K. T. K. again, this time at Columbian park, East Liverpool.

On Thursday they will tackle Laughlin, the champion club of the first half, at Newell.

Women Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60 cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Polls For August Primaries Open

Polls for the August 10 primaries, when electors will select Republican and Democratic nominees for state, district and county offices for the final heat in November, were formally opened in Columbiana county today as election supervisors began to comply with absent voters' requests for ballots.

Enfranchised men and women who now are away, or expect to be absent from their home precincts on election day, have the right to exercise the suffrage privilege by mail not earlier than 30 days prior to the primaries or general election. The deadline for acceptance of applications is the third day prior to balloting day, or not later than Saturday, August 7.

This law, enacted primarily for men who were called into the military service during 1917, when America entered the World war, removes the chief excuse of qualified electors for failure to perform their duty as citizens. Whether in Portland, Oregon, or Portland, Maine, a Columbiana county voter does not disfranchise himself.

Electors who receive ballots under the provisions of this law must mark them in the presence of an election board official or notary public in the state in which the applicant is a visitor, and then forward them to his county board. These ballots are counted by precinct officers on election day.

If you expect to be absent from your home precinct on primary day, apply for ballots. Don't deprive yourself of a voice in the selection of your party's ticket for the November election.

Protection For Empty Houses

The police department of some cities are urging prospective vacationers to notify the chief of police in writing, giving their house address and the length of time they expect to be out of town. The idea is to protect the house from robbers and other perils.

With such notification, the various policemen on duty regularly try doors and observe the condition of the place. At the slighest sign of entry or disturbance they will investigate. One or two shades should be left up so that the patrolman can look into the house. Thieves like lowered shades.

Some people tempt burglars, the police say, by leaving a note on the door saying they will be gone for a month or a week or whatever the period is.

Perhaps few citizens realize that they could have such service from the police department. It ought to be made more widely known. A word to the wise householder should be sufficient and, police protection or not, it is well to put valuable silver and jewelry into a safety deposit vault, right along with shutting off the water. These few simple precautions insure a happier homecoming.

Open Wells Banned

"Use of open wells from which water is drawn by means of a rope and bucket is hereby prohibited."

With these cruel words the board of health of Sacramento, Cal., outlaws the "old oaken bucket." It will be a hard blow to many a sentimental grown-up, with pleasant memories of the open well of his youth and with a fine, poetical regard for "the moss-covered bucket" that slaked his youthful thirst.

It may have been all right, too, in olden days. There may not have been so many disease germs floating around then, and lurking in the moss on that venerable bucket to attack the unwary drinker. Yet we can't be too sure about that, for by all accounts there was a sad mortality rate in past generations, and well buckets may have been, many a time, the means of spreading typhoid and other epidemics that devastated whole villages and countrysides.

In this present age, anyway, medical science has proved that open wells are likely to be polluted, and the buckets in them are mischievous germ-carriers. Sacramento sets a good example.

Wells are all right if the sources of their water are not contaminated, and if they are kept closed at the top. Surface water is always to be avoided, doctors say, for fear of germs. If the water is drawn from a sufficient depth, if the well is sealed at the top and no dirt of any kind is allowed to enter, very well. All other wells are doubtful, and therefore to be avoided.

Child Adoption Pays

A discussion about child adoption has been running in a Canadian newspaper. Among those who have adopted youngsters the opinion seems to be unanimous that it is wholly worth while, that the adopted children are just as beloved and just as great a blessing and, under equally sound home training, turn out just as well as do "own children."

The biggest problem in adoption seems to be the neighborhood busy-body who labors under the delusion that there is something awfully peculiar about an adopted child. This pest may be an adult who suspects some unpleasant circumstances somewhere to be ferreted out and gossiped about and who prophesies unpleasant results. Or he may be some silly school child who taunts the adopted child. These pests may be largely overcome by telling the child the truth while showing him how much he is also loved and wanted.

In a world where there are so many homes needing children and so many children needing homes, and where there are now adequate means of bringing the two together happily and successfully, it ought to be possible to develop a more normal attitude toward adoption.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 12.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up betimes and breakfasted on stewed prunes and reflected how this elegant dish suffered in popularity from boarding house puns. And K. Kitchen dropped in, and looking at the prunes, said "What! No artichokes!"

So to walk and saw Edgar Selwyn and his pretty bride and also Pierre Van Passen, the scrivener, who has been in Poland and has articled to write for newspapers from European centers. And saw a wrist watch bearing a price I thought to be $50 and about to buy when the clerk said $500 and I said "Oh" and walked away in such confusion I opened a door to a closet.

It came suddenly to rain and I stood at the curb signalling taxis until drenched and when one stopped I opened the door and a lady rushed out from a store saying "This is mine!" and rode away. So home and to bed.

In mid-town streets a familiar figure is a man who ambles about on stilts 10 feet high wearing advertising banners front and back for some movie, optical house of restaurant.

The other morning two gentlemen were leaving a theatrical club for a whiff of fresh air after a hectic night. Nerves were a bit jumpy. One finally remarked consolingly: "This is exactly what we needed. I feel fine."

The other happened to glance across the street as the man on stilts was casually straddling a contractor's street hut in his promenade.

"You might feel all right,' he said with a quick gasp, "but I'm in a hell of a fix.

Fortune tellers have touts who mingle among the credulous drumming up clients in a subtle way. The cafes and night clubs are chief fields of operation. They discuss a certain sorcerer for the benefit of listeners at the next table, winding up the eulogy by giving the name and address. One of the stories, frequently overheard, was that a certain actor was going to marry a very rich woman. A fortune teller had told him so. He did but he had never been to a fortune teller in his life, although through the subtle touting the lady fortune teller reaped a whirlwind of business.

In certain remote districts New York still has those undernourished looking youths with ladders who light street lamps. They seem to have stepped from the pages of Horatio Alger, Jr., books, where tattered heroes, stung by the lash of poverty, win success and marry the banker's daughter.

There is something interesting about the "atmosphere girls" in the Greenwich Village cafes and coffee houses. Each place has one or two. They have a wickedly knowing air, eat up cigarets with a few quick inhales, and can discuss all the current isms. Some wear paint-flecked smocks and sandals to heighten the studio effect. They are usually known by first names, such as Colette, Yvonne or Vera. It is their job to be off-stage actresses and give Elmer Finch, a lonely buyer, the idea the Village lives and loves lightly. Like straying husbands, they know what it is to be misunderstood. They have suffered for Art. Which consists chiefly in crying some sufficiently "crocked" table companion out of a week's rent or a $40 dress toward which by scrimping and starving they have been only able to save $5.

New York dressmakers are trying desperately to swing fashion into flowery paths. It is their wail that woman's dress has reached the simplicity of a mere uniform and needs more individuality. Waistlines, longer skirts and more frills are being urged.

HOW TO BEAT THE SYSTEM.

"Tiny" Maxwell is a sporting writer in Philadelphia. He is called "Tiny" because he is about the size of a two ton tractor. He has a ready wit, as his readers will testify.

Because he is an expert at football and also because back in his college days he was a gridiron star of magnitude, Mr. Maxwell frequently is called upon in the season to referee games along the Eastern Seaboard.

One afternoon last fall he was officiating at a match between Georgetown, which, as everybody knows, is a Catholic institution, and a team representing a Southern university. In an interval one of the Southern players limped up to Maxwell.

"Mr. Referee," he said, "I want to make a protest. There's one of those Georgetown men that seems to have a grudge against me. Every time we two get in a scrimmage together he bites me. Yes, sir, he just hauls off and bites me. I don't want to start any rough house stuff, but I'm getting good and tired of having that big Irishman biting on me. What had I better do?"

"I should advise," said Tiny, "that you play him on Fridays."

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Living Costs in England.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—Figures recently made available here in a comparison of living costs in England and in the United States indicate that money goes almost as far on the other side of the Atlantic at the present time as it did in this country in the days when, as tradition has it, George Washington threw a dollar across the Potomac.

British workers with their relatively low wages, many of them receiving a weekly wage that barely equals a day's pay of an American mechanic, are not at such a disadvantage as the disparity in earnings would seem to show. They get little money in comparison with what American workers receive, but they get a great deal more for their money when it comes to standing off the wolf.

Twelve dollars a week would not be regarded as a living wage by any American worker. The unskilled laborer receives far more than that, usually at least twice that much, and as a rule his earnings are supplemented by those of at least one other member of his family. Even then such wage earners in this country admittedly are hard put to it to make both ends meet.

Consider, then, the surprising statement that there are thousands of happy British homes supported on a wage of $12 a week and many maintained comfortably on less.

The first item in the cost of living anywhere is rent or housing, and it is in this that the most striking difference is found between costs in England and in the United States. Two dollars a week is the average rent paid by British working men's families, according to the report of an investigation that covered the entire country, and that is for families of five or more. It is not necessary to quote rental figures in the United States to show the great advantage the British worker has in this item of his living budget. The American worker can house a family of five for four or five times the average rental of his English cousins is fortunate, and it is doubtful whether a nation-wide survey in this country would disclose a single instance of a family of five securing anything approximating adequate living quarters for two dollars a week.

In fact, employers, economists, and philanthropists who are seeking to solve the housing problem in this country have set as the mark of the utmost that can be accomplished in a city such as New York rentals of from eight to ten dollars per room per month—per room, and not per house that will shelter a family of five.

Cheap Birmingham Rents.

Within five miles of the center of Birmingham, one of the great industrial cities of England, there is at Bourneville one of the first garden city schemes inaugurated in that country. There the highest rent for model houses situated in a model community is with a few exceptions $2.50 per week and more than one-half of the houses are rented for less than $2 per week. Tenants, in the latter cases, must pay the local taxes, but that adds comparatively little to

TWO ROBBERS USE POKER TO SUBDUE WOMAN

Mrs. Robert Myers, Near Rogers, is Attacked.

JEWELRY STOLEN

Victim Beaten Into Unconsciousness While Husband is Absent.

Columbiana county authorities today were searching for two unidentified men, who ransacked the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Myers, on the Millrock road, near Rogers, early Saturday afternoon, after brutally beating Mrs. Myers over the head with a poker. The robbers escaped with a diamond and pearl lavallier with a watch chain and a man's lodge ring.

Mrs. Myers was preparing to iron when the two men entered the kitchen and struck her over the head with a poker. While she was unconscious they searched the house. Three of the woman's children were asleep in the up-stairs of the house at the time of the assault and robbery. The fourth was with his mother but was not harmed by the strangers.

When Mrs. Myers regained consciousness an hour or more after the men had left the house, Sheriff Wright was notified. He hurried to the scene but could find no trace of the burglars. Neighbors reported having seen two men leaving the farm. The woman sustained a deep scalp wound as a result of the blow.

Her husband was working on a farm near Fairfield at the time of the attack.

hell, that they, the blessed, might enjoy the contrast.

MR. AVERESCU, in charge of Rumanian affair, plans to adjust his country's financial troubles by paper money expansion. His idea is to print a billion lei, and use them to buy American dollars and British pounds. The idea is all right, if anybody can be pursuaded to trade real money for the product of a lei printing machine.

MR. AVERESCU also plans to invite participation of American capital in the development of Rumania.

That country's chances of enlisting American support would be better had Rumania retained Bibesco as Rumanian minister at Washington. When Rumania lost Bibesco's services here, it lost one of the most popular and earnest of the foreign representatives.

And many Americans resent the abrupt withdrawal of a minister who was most welcome.

BAD news is the appearance of the Mexican cotton flea in several southern states. The government has warned cotton planters of the new danger, and will doubtless do more than issue warnings.

A menace to one of the nation's greatest sources of wealth threatens the whole country and is as much of the nation's business as the landing of an enemy army.

FARMERS of northern Louisiana meet the danger by engaging airplanes to dust the growing cotton with sulphur. Even in fighting insect life, the airplane is the only weapon.

Government should aid in that fight from the air and it really ought to take a serious interest in airplane production.

COMMANDER BYRD, first class American and first human being to fly over the north pole, told Wall Street men, who entertained him, that he once planned to try his luck in Wall Street. Only lack of cash held him back.

Many pale, thin ghosts that haunt New street and the back door of the stock exchange at night would advise Byrd to stick to the north pole—a much safter resort.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN asked Byrd, who called at his office, what the chances were for a branch bank at the pole. Byrd replied that Eskimos care nothing for money, the bank would have to deal in red beads. Mr. Morgan was not tempted.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER believes in seeing for himself. He has actually drilled and "brought in" in a good oil well inside the arctic. It is plugged up, held in reserve, waiting for better transportation facilities. You might call that foresight.

IT IS estimated that the United States will produce 710,000,000 barrels of oil this year, nearly seven barrels for every man, woman and child.

Oil variously used, represents power and efficiency. And civilization today depends on production of energy, apart from human labor, as in olden times it depended on slave labor before machinery was perfected.

Every barrel of oil, every horsepower of steam or electricity ought to mean greater freedom for human beings.

Ex-Secretary of War

direct descendant of Leonard Weeks, one of the New Hampshire pioneers.

In the hills of the Granite state, across the boundary line from Vermont where Calvin Coolidge was reared, there were instilled in him as a boy, the Yankee characteristics of shrewdness and common sense that enabled him to attain the pinacle of sucess.

A revered judge, the elder Weeks taught the future cabinet member at night, after the day's farm chores were done, and at the age of 17 John Wingate Weeks branched forth as a teacher in the district school.

Later, while attending Dartmouth college, Weeks grasped an opportunity to enter the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and served two years as a midshipman after graduating.

Engages in Brokerage Business.

At that time, however, the government had far more officers than ships and the number of commissions was cut down, Weeks returning to civilian life.

He then went to Florida and took a job running out lines of old Spanish grants. It was there that he met, wooed and married Miss Martha A. Sinclair, daughter of Charles A. Sinclair, partner of Frank Jones, famous brewer.

Shortly after, acting on a friend's "tip," Weeks came to Boston, and, although knowing nothing of the stock brokerage business, he managed to borrow enough money to buy a partnership in a firm that did a flourishing trade as Hornblower & Weeks.

Weeks served in the Spanish-American war as a captain in command of the second division, auxiliary United States naval force on the Atlantic coast, and at the time of his death today he was a reserve admiral in the navy.

It was in Newton, Mass., 26 years ago, that Weeks first tasted political He liked it, became a candidate for life, winning a contest for alderman, mayor, and was elected.

Smitten with political ambition, Weeks then launched a campaign for congress from the Twelfth district and he was elected to the fifty-ninth congress, serving right through to the sixty-third congress when he resigned to take his seat in the United States senate.

While still a senator, in 1916, Weeks was strongly in favor with certain elements in the Republican party for the presidential nomination that ultimately went to Charles Evans Hughes.

In 1919 he retired from the senate and devoted himself almost exclusively to his political party until his appointment to the cabinet by the late President Harding.

TOWN DESERTED AFTER BLAST

Mount Hope, N. J., Looks Like Place on War Front.

MOUNT HOPE, N. J., July 12. — This village, which lies in the shadow of Lake Denmark, N. J., scene of the terrific arsenal explosion, is as deserted as a town on the western front after an invasion.

The entire populace has departed. All that are here are newcomers—those on duty.

From a distance newspaper men and army officers peer cautiously over the edge of hills, below which lies a stretch of valley, pitted with shell holes exactly like those that flecked the battlefields of France.

Some of the holes are deep enough to allow four or five persons to stand without crowding.

Now and then shells were bursting upon this valley this morning smoke from a hundred burning spots drifted across the valley.

All was silent. Not a soul moved across this zone of danger. Trees were split. The grass was burned brown in huge spots. Remnants of shells that had exploded with heavy detonations were strewn about. Some of them still smouldering.

Durkin's Spurned Sweetheart Wed to "Boy Out of Job"

CHICAGO, July 12.—Betty Andrews Werner, the girl who Martin Durkin, bandit and killer, "left behind," today was on her honeymoon, with a surprise husband.

Scheduled to be married to Arthur Werner, father of her nameless child, Marty's abandoned sweetheart changed her mind and Saturday night became the bride of Clyde Whalen, 28, described by himself as a toilet goods salesman, but by his mother as "a boy out of a job."

Two Bandits Stage Triple Murder Near Spot in Cicero, Ill., Where Gangsters Killed "Hanging Prosecutor."

CHICAGO, July 12. — A Sunday school superintendent, his fiancee and a taxicab driver were shot and killed by two bandits in Cicero, West Chicago suburb, early today. The scene of the triple murder was within a stone's throw of the spot where several months ago Assistant State's Attorney William McSwiggin and two companions were shot to death.

One of the bandits was captured and is said to have confessed his part in the crime.

The dead are:

Fred Heine, 45, Sunday school superintendent of Salem Evangelical church.

Miss Marie Blang, 23, Heine's fiancee.

Ludwig Rose, 24, taxicab driver.

The couple were slain as they sat in an automobile in front of Miss Blang's home. Rose died in the county hospital three hours after the shooting. He said the bandit pair hired him and told him to drive to a certain address. When they neared the automobile occupied by Heine and Miss Blang they commanded him to stop.

They robbed Rose, stripped him of his uniform and attempted to take his car. When he objected they shot him through the stomach. He said he heard the shots that killed Heine and Miss Blang as he lay in the street a block away.

The captured bandit gave his name as Thomas McWain. He said he did not know his companion's name as they had met only four days before. He said the fugitive bandit did all the shooting.

"4—$100,000.00 appropriation to be used for the purpose of investigating and recovering, if possible, millions of dollars of the people's finances that have been lost, strayed or stolen since 1920, through incompetency and reckless disregard for the people's rights.

"5—Fifty per cent reduction in the number of state employes and a 25 per cent, salary increase for the remaining half, thereby securing competent help that can be held mentally and morally responsible for their official acts at a saving of millions of dollars for the taxpayers of Ohio.

"6—Favoring any legislation that will make the farmer and laborer more prosperous and comfortable, for the reason that if the farmer and laborer are prosperous, all other elements of society will not need to worry.

"7—Favoring higher wages and shorter hours for women working in factories or doing other laborious work.

"8—Abolition of the state pardon board and the enactment of a statute empowering the governor to appoint a local pardon board in each county of two members, one to be appointed from each of the two dominant political parties, thereby giving the poor man an equal opportunity with the rich for the benefit of clemency, which would place the matter in the hands of local men in each county who are in closer touch with the character of a convict seeking relief, thereby making it harder for the unworthy to be released and easier for those that are worthy."

Beatty spent the night here and left this morning for Cincinnati, where, he told newspaper men, he will speak at a mass meeting in Music hall tonight. He said he would return to East Liverpool Wednesday morning.

from entering the ruins because of this fact, and also because it is known that on the navy side of the arsenal there still is a big powder magazine which hasn't gone off, and that on the army side of the reservation are stored some 400 aerial bombs—the heaviest type of explosives known—as well as a considerable amount of T. N. T. and other explosives.

Thousands of curious sought to get close to the scene but were backed by state troopers. Traffic in all directions two miles from the scene was being diverted.

A field hospital has been established outside the zone of fire. Doctors and nurses from nearby cities and towns and from New York are busy taking care of the wounded.

LAKE DENMARK, N. J., July 12.—More explosions are feared today in the disaster of the naval ammunition depot here and the partial destruction of the army arsenal at Picatinny. Precautions have been taken to prevent a catastrophe at the army depot. Fires are still raging and may cause new detonations with further loss of human life.

Countryside is Rocked.

The first explosion occurred late Saturday and was followed by a series of blasts which rocked the countryside, turning the district into a No Man's Land.

If the wind changes its course it is feared the huge arsenal at Picatinny will be set ablaze from sparks drifting across the gully that separates the army and naval stations.

The first explosion occurred when a lightning bolt struck a quantity of ammunition at the navy base. A minute later there was another, and the from the depot that sheltered the depth bombs, weapons filled with TNT and stored for use against enemy submarines.

There was a terrific blast. A minute later there was nother, and the third came shortly after 8 o'clock. Bombs from the navy depot had found some of the army mazagines, and the shells were flying.

Windows were broken in an area 30 miles around. People believed that an earthquake had occurred.

3,000 Persons Homeless.

Groupes of marines were to explore the shattered countryside for the dead following teh arrival of five companies of the fifth regiment of marines from Quantico, Va. The detachment numbered 204 officers and men.

The marines arrived from the Virginia station on a special train. Carrying emergency rations and full war time equipment, they took over police duty at the wrecked naval post.

Scenes of horror are scattered in the wake of the terrific explosion that followed the destruction of a TNT magazine by lightning.

Relief among stricken civilians in the swept area, which covers 10 towns, is being pushed by the Red Cross and other agencies. More than 3,000 persons have been rendered homeless, it is estimated.

A field hospital has been established outside the zone of fire. Bursting of shells add to the task of assisting the thousands of refugees.

Six bodies were reported seen early today amid the shell craters and ruins by physicians in an advanced first aid post. The bodies wil be recovered as quickly as it is possible to penetrate the barrage.

Six Towns Deserted.

A state forest ranger from Morristown, who passed Lake Denmark, saw a charred body in the water. Three marines had been bathing in the lake just before the explosion and it is believed all perished.

Six towns are deserted. The desolation recalls the war-town villages in France. The towns are Marcella, Hibbernia, Longwood, Mud Lane, Mount Hope and Spicerstown. Mount Hope is a complete ruin and the property damage to the others is immense.

Roads in the vichity of the swept district are patrolled by soldiers, sailors, marines and state troopers. Thousands of sightseers from a dozen states have flocked to the scene of the catastrophe. They are barred from close approach.

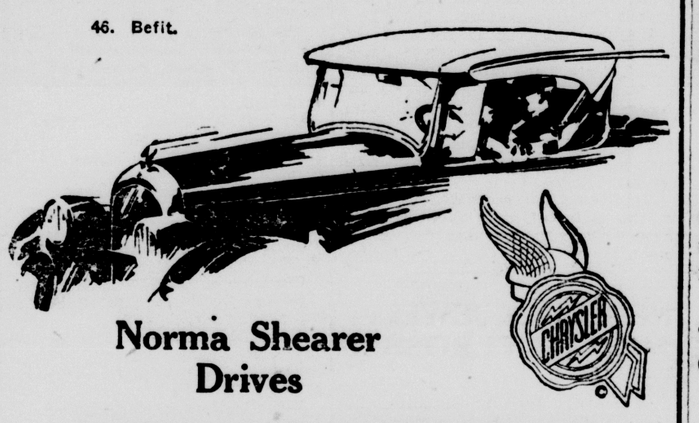

Inspection of the wrecked naval station was made by Secretary of War Davis.

He expressed his admiration of the assistance which had been rendered the stricken area by the officers of the New York and New Jersey police forces, not only immediately following the disaster, but since that time, in policing and regulating traffic on the roads.

"MISS NOBODY" AT AMERICAN

Anna Q. Nilsson is Seen in Unusual Role.

Anna Q. Nilsson is seen in one of the most unusual roles of her career in "Miss Nobody," now showing at the American theatre here.

The beautiful First National star takes the part of a hobo in "Miss Nobody." She wears mannish clothes throughout the major portion of the picture.

"Miss Nobody" is an adaptation of the celebrated Tiffany Well's novel, "Shebo," which achieved great success both in book and serial form. Shebo, as the heroine is called, disguises herself as a tramp in order to evade the unwelcome attentions of an admirer.

Lambert Hillyer, who directed "Miss Nobody," has made the episodes of tramp life quite authentic. Six genuine Knights of the Road were engaged by the director to act in the picture as well as to give expert advice.

The four principal male actors in "Miss Nobody" grew long beards for their parts in the picture. Walter Pidgeon, who plays opposite Miss Nilsson, grew the longest crop of whiskers, with Arthur Stone, Mitchell Lewis and Clyde Cooke close runners-up, or runners-down.

During the screening of "Miss Nobody" in one of the mountainous districts of California, Miss Nilsson narrowly escaped being bitten by a deadly rattlesnake, which prepared to strike at her as she rolled down a railway embankment.

The snake was killed, however, and now the star is wearing shoes made out of its skin.

PARIS.—Alcoholism in France is on a rampant increase.

In a report made by Dr. Labbe, famous French surgeon, it was revealed that consumption of alcoholic drinks had increased more than one hundred percent. since the war. The re-establishment of small distillers is believed partially responsible, there being 2,376, 285 of these in France today.

MANY ENGAGED IN CLUB WORK

Membership of Rural Organizations Climb Steadily.

Unusual activity in rural club work among young people has been developed this season by County Agent Floyd Lower, more clubs being formed than ever before, and with a larger membership. These club's have to do with poultry, calf, pig, sheep, potato, food and clothing work.

Care has been used in selecting club leaders, as it has been pointed out it is essential to have leaders who take an interest in the endeavors of young people before the success of any club work is assured. Club work also, it has been pointed out by County Agent Lower is a matter of education, and development of the youth of the farm in the intensified methods of farm development.

At this time there are 14 boys and girls in the county identified with poultry club work, while 10 are interested in calf club work. Fifteen are concerned in pig club work and nine in sheep clubs. In the potato club 40 boys and girls have been enrolled, in live stock and crop clubs.

Many townships have clubs in which all these activities are being developed, while there are other townships where only a nominal number of clubs have so far been formed.

In the clothing project, 219 girls have been enrolled, but no such club has been formed in Liverpool township, whereas in Knox and Butler townships two such clubs have been formed in each township. Do You Believe You Can Be Thin And Healthy, Too?

Writer Says Folks Underweight Should Consider Question Seriously.

MAKES STARTLING STATEMENTS

Excessive thinness should not be confused with attractive and perfectly healthy slenderness. One does not need to be "fat" in order to be healthy—slenderness is not skinniness—but men and women of subnormal weight, who do not look or feel at their best, should honestly try to correct their weakness at once!

Those who treat the matter lightly or try to "laugh it off" by blaming their "thinness" on family characteristics are doing themselves a grave injustice and are seemingly blind to well-known facts.

Thinness invariably means Low Vitality—Low Vitality means a weakened condition and poor resistance—poor resistance means an easy prey (a waiting victim) for practically every disease that may come along. One does not need to be a Doctor to understand these things. Common Sense, observation and the fact that Life Insurance Companies absolutely refuse to sell Insurance to those who are "too thin" furnish convincing daily proofs—that one cannot be very much underweight and healthy, too!

Every day of delay increases the difficulty of best results from proper treatment—so, if you or any of your friends are excessively thin, don't wait, but start doing something about it at once. In the opinion of the writer, one of the best and simplest means of proper treatment is a few weeks' use of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. Tiny, tasteless tablets—containing the well known concentrated flesh-building value, the physical power and strength of Cod Livers—minus the offensive odor and terrible taste. A wonderful tonic and builder recommended and supplied by Carnahan's Drug Stores and all good druggists—60 tablets 60c—on a money back if not satisfied plan. Nearly 20 million McCoy's tablets sold last month, and wonderful reports of "gains in weight" received almost every day. Ask your druggist.

How He Discovered Best Constipation Relief

Mr. Joseph F. Glus of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes "In the past 20 years I have been constantly troubled with constipation. Every remedy I tried would work O.K. for a while—but soon failed. The only remedy I have been able to use steadily with good results have been Carter's Little Liver Pills. I don't guess when I take them—I know I'm going to feel relieved." 25c at all druggists.

PLENTY OF ACTION ALWAYS ON TAP IN 101 RANCH WILD WEST

DAN DIX AND "VERGIL"

When Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Real Wild West and Great Far East comes to town Saturday, July 17, at the circus grounds at Columbian park, it will bring more than a thousand people and hundreds of horses, to say nothing of buffalo, elephants, camels, oxen, burros, ponies and longhorns, but "the thing it will have most of," to quote Octavius Roy Cohen, is action.

Nothing but action. In the Far East and the Cossack circus pagentry there will be beauty, and the two-mile street parade is colorful and picturesque, but action is the mainmost article with 101. Look at Ed Conroy, for instance. One minute before the camera clicked he was sitting atop "King Cole" eating cut plug. The cameraman asked for "a little action, please," and Ed started from where he is in the picture. The cameramen got plenty of action, and the crowds about got a thrill.

Below we see funny Dan Dix and his mule, "Vergil" the immovable. They have made thousands laugh daily.

PRO GRID LEAGUE ADOPTS 1926 SCHEDULE

OPEN CAMPAIGN SEPTEMBER 19

Los Angeles Combine is Given Franchise in Loop.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 12.—The National Football league, with 22 clubs in attendance and 50 delegates present, completed a two-day session here with adoption of the 1926 schedule.

Opening games are listed for Sept. 19. The season will close on Dec. 17. Opening games are: Akron at Philadelphia; Columbus at Canton, Ohio; Chicago Bears at Green Bay, Wis.; Brooklyn at Providence, R. I.; Hammond, Indiana, at Race, Wis.; Detroit at Milwaukee.

A franchise was issued to the Los Angeles Football corporation, backed by moving picture interests of the west.

The club will be composed of leading western college stars and they will play all their early games away from home. They will play every week and at the close of the season a number of the foremost clubs in the east and middle west will go to the coast for games there.

Racine Reinstated.

The Racine team, inactive last year, applied for reinstatement and was granted an active franchise for this season. The Pottsville club, which won the championship in 1925 only to have it forfeited for playing a game in Philadelphia with a team known as the Four Horsemen when Frankford was scheduled, was reinstated after Dr. J. K. Striegel paid a fine of $2,500 imposed by Joseph H. Carr, president of the league.

Another new club taken into the fold was Brooklyn. This club will be managed by Edward W. Butler, quarterback and captain of the 1912 Cornell team. The Hartford, Connecticut, Blues with James Mulligan at the head were also granted membership, while the New Britain team withdrew. Cleveland and Minneapolis asked permission to withdraw, which was granted.

Carr made a strong plea to the league to adhere to the rule passed recently providing that no college player be signed by any team until he has graduated.

Co-Operate With Colleges.

In order that a clearer understanding with colleges may be had a committee was appointed to confer with Brigadier General Palmer A. Pierce, president of the Intercollegiate Athletic Union, in New York today.

The committee consists of Judge James J. Dooley, Providence; George Halas, Chicago; Dr. Harry A. March, New York, and C. B. Coffin, of Providence, R. I.

Many former college stars have been signed by teams in the league, but the clubs desire to keep their identity secret for some time for various reasons. It was announced, however, that Ernie Nevers, All-American fullback of California, will have charge of the Duluth club, to be known as Nevers' Eskimos.

The league accepted the new forward pass rule. A transfer of the Milwaukee franchise from A. L. McOurk to John Bryan was approved.

K. OF C. TOSSERS SEEKING GAMES

Manager Joseph McKenna, of the Knights of Columbus baseball club, today issued a challenge to amateur teams in the East Liverpool district for games during the remainder of July and early August.

The Knights defeated the West End Merchants, 8 to 6, at Patterson Field last Wednesday night, and took the Dixonville nine into camp by the same score on the Dixonville field Friday night.

Newer Champs Can Revive Boxing Game If They Choose

Of recent days two new faces have bobbed up in the ranks of the boxing ring champions—Pete Latzo and Sammy Mandell.

These men bear major championship honors. Latzo wears the welterweight crown he knocked from the head of Mickey Walker. Mandell gave the venerable Rocky Kansas his final boxing lesson and wrested the world's lightweight crown from his graying head.

These two newly crowned kings, along with the only other two who are active, hold it within their power to bring to fistic fandom a new era in boxing—or rather a return to the old era.

By the mighty power of their rights and the cunning of their lefts they can bring the game back to a place of prestige and bring it back to the man on the street.

Latzo Keeps Busy.

Latzo has already started his one-man campaign to do this. He has already defended his title thrice and is accepting more matches, large and small, naming no opponents or referees. His last victory was a four-round decision on a foul over George Levine.

Sammy Mandell, after a well deserved honeymoon in the east, will defend his newly won crown, according to Eddie Kane. The fans want to see both of these fighters. They're young, willing to fight, and popular.

Paul Berlenbach has been fighting a one-man warfare for months to put boxing on a fighting basis. Ever since he won the somewhat dusty and dented light heavyweight championship from Mike McTigue, Berlenbach has walked around with a chip on one shoulder and a chip on the other. He risked his title recently against one of the most talked of, if not one of the toughest eggs, in the division when he met Young Stribling—and proceeded to give him a few lessons in socking. And the wires hadn't finished peddling the yarns of that fight when he agreed to meet Jack Delaney again this month.

Kaplan Uses Convincing Fists.

Louis Kid Kaplan didn't convince the entire world he was a real champ when he defeated Danny Kramer in their match, following the abdication of Johnny Dundee, without a struggle. But that didn't bother Kaplan. He started in defending whatever part of the title you gave him credit for and kept busy at it until he resigned the title. Now he's a lightweight possibility.

Great Walter Hagen Not Slipping; Bobby Is Simply Getting Better

Class Tells as Jones, Despite Staleness and Burden of Overgolfing, Wins Open Laurels.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The popular belief that Bobby Jones is the greatest golfer that ever lived doesn't require my confirmation today, some thirty hours after he won his third major title, the national open championship, at Scioto. All I can do is enhance the young man's greatness with the remark that Bobby was stale and over-golfed at Columbus, a fact that he freely conceded before, during and after the tournament.

Yet he won from all the great ones, including Hagen, Diegel, Sarazen, Mac Smith, Mahlhorn, Evans, Farrell, and others who neither were supposed to be over-golfed nor burdened by the riches of notoriety that inevitably follows the winning of a great championship like the British open.

Hits Stride on Last Lap.

Jones was hitting his shots at Scioto only on the final nine holes that won him the title. The 70 he got for the first eighteen holes he said, simply came unasked. He didn't, in other words, consider that he was playing good golf just because he happened to be scoring well.

Jones is neither a braggart nor an alibi man. Therefore, the inference is clear that, had he played typical golf around the "bloody hayfield" he would have made a competitive travesty of the championship.

As it was, even that misfit second round of 79 didn't prevent him from increasing his lead in total strokes over Walter Hagen for the eight championships in which both have been started. He now has twenty-six strokes on the bland Mr. Hagen, or an average of three and one quarter strokes for each tournament.

Hagen as Good as Ever.

Some, in accounting for Jones' obvious superiority at the moment, seem inclined to suggest that Walter has seen better days. They are quite wrong. Walter Hagen is just as good as he ever was—a man who overcomes a tendency toward wildness with his truly amazing "money shots" and a great competitive soul. The real answer is that Bobby Jones, getting better with each passing year, has gone beyond Hagen.

Whether he will be able to make the thing unanimous by winning the national amateur at Baltusrol in September is a matter best left to the tender mercies of psychologists and "percentage players." The latter say that Bobby hasn't a chance, simply because golf history and the law of averages are against any man winning the national amateur title for three straight years, particularly after running through the British and American open fields.

The only thing the matter with that argument is that percentage figuring doesn't apply to a golfer like Bobby Jones any more than a shoe horn applies to a neck.

The Braves went berserk and slaughtered the Cardinals, 19 to 5, after dropping the opening game of a double-header, 7 to 2. The Braves collected 23 hits in the nightcap, which marked their first victory over the Cards after 10 straight defeats.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON.

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

There is no one absolutely fixed way for the golf swing. Some good pros teach that the first thing to do is break the clubhead directly back from the ball with the wrists. That is Jock Hutchinson's method — one of the soundest of golfers who is remarkably successful as an instructor, an unusual achievement. And to prove that other methods are not Americanizations of the game we have George Duncan, as Scotch as Carnoustie, who drags the clubhead back, away behind his hands, until his arms, when about midway back with the club, find his left wrist almost directly under his right forearm. Hutchinson's wrist action is more modern and it perhaps is somewhat easier for the average player to hit the ball with Hutchinson's method. This, after all, has to be the primary object of the teacher—the pupil wants to hit it. While the one method is easier I think the other is sounder.

SKULL PRACTICE

Four "best dressed" golfers at the recent national open tourney are going to receive their clothes free from a clothing concern for a year. Who said clothes didn't make the man?

Hank Gowdy thanked Minneapolis fans for their "Gowdy Day" recently by socking a homer, double and single and nipping three attempted steals. And the big league moguls who were going to "take care of Hank" because of his war service, tried to skip that paragaraph in the day's news.

Babe Ruth is a dozen games behing his 1921 record in knocking home runs. But that doesn't make the remaining weeks any brighter for the pitchers.

Milwaukee has a new shortstop star in Flippen and the bugs flock to the park just to see him Flippen about.

INTER-CLUB TILT SATURDAY

Local Golfers Practice for Steubenville Match.

With an extra week to get in trim before their first inter-club match of the season, local golfers will negotiate a few extra practice rounds between now and next Saturday when they will play the Steubenville Country club team here in the first of two matches.

The clash originally was billed for last Saturday, but with a number of members of both the local and the Steubenville team in Columbus for the national open finals, it was postponed a week.

The return tilt will be staged on August 7 at Steubenville.

An old pal foursome, to have been played next Saturday and moved ahead one week, took the place of the inter-club matches in week-end golf activities here.

The foursome was won by Mrs. C. H. Walker and Edwin Wells, Jr., with a best ball card of 70.

Honors in the sweepstakes were captured by Arthur A. Wells, with a score of 78.

WOMEN'S GOLF MEET LAUNCHED

The day was ideal for golfing.

Cleveland has entered 17 contestants; Toledo 22; Cincinnati 3; Tiffin 4; while individual players are listed from Youngstown, Springfield, Dayton, Columbus and Zanesville.

Miss Martha Kinsey of Cincinnati, present state champion is again entered as is Miss Louise Ferdyce, the sensational Youngstown player.

The sixteen players with the lowest scores in the qualifying round will enter championship matches. Play will continue each morning until Friday.

Will Give Virginian 'Big Shot' In Twelve Rounds to Decision

Latzo, Defending Crown Third Time in 18 Days, to Trade Punches With Ted Nelson, Richmond, Va., Pug Friday Night at North End Ball Park.

STEUBENVILLE, July 12. — This city next Friday night, July 16, makes its first bid for prominence as a "fight town" when Pete Latzo, the Scranton, Pa., coal miner, and welterweight champion of the world, defends his crown in a 12-round decision bout with Ted Nelson, Richmond, Va., at the North End Ball Park.

The big fistic event, the first outdoor ring show Steubenville has had in 50 years, the first big fight it ever had and the first title bout staged in Ohio since Britton won welter laurels from Lewis at Canton, is being promoted by the American Legion and the Steubenville Athletic Association, headed by James H. Gill, wealthy clay manufacturer and sportsman.

Mike McKinney, the former Canton promoter who staged the Britton-Lewis fight, is doing the matchmaking for the big show here.

It will make the third time in 18 crown and Nelson expects to give him days that Latzo has defended his a harder battle than did Willie Harmon and Georgie Levin. Nelson is a welter from Europe who is now fighting out of Richmond, Va., under the direction of Charles Rose, prominent New York manager.

Nelson completed ten days of hard work at a farm near his home city and then went to New York where he is completing his training grind. Paul Berlenbach and Mike McTigue are numbered among his sparring partners.

Both fighters and their handlers are expected to arrive here Thursday morning.

The semi-final of the big show looms as a battle of main bout calibre. It brings together Tommy Crowley, Pittsburgh who is regarded as the best boy the Smoky City has produced since the Zivics, and Jimmy Perry, Alliance's new featherweight sensation.

The referee for the battle will be agreed upon by Paddy Mullins, pilot of the champ, and Rose. Three prominent officials are being considered. They are Eddie Davis, Tommy McGinty and Matt Hinkle.

The profits of the show will go into the Police and Firemen's pension funds.

Haskin's Letter

their weekly or monthly housing expense.

In a London suburb, less than ten miles from Charing Cross, model houses, semi-detached, situated in the middle of open spaces, and each with its garden, may be secured for $5 a week. Try to get a proposition like that within ten miles of the City Hall in New York, or in the suburbs of any American city! These London houses, it may be added, are of six to eight rooms, and with what the real estate people in this country designate in their advertisements as "a. m. i." While they may not have exactly what goes for "all modern improvements" in the United States they at least have baths.

Two families, each of three members, with practically the same income, live, one a half-hour from Wall Street, in New York, and the other, a half-hour from Charing Cross, London. They compared their housing costs. The Englishman's rent was $24 a month, to which he added $5 a month for heat. The American's rent, including heat, was $150 a month—a shade more than five times what the Englishman paid—and he had only a small apartment while the Englishman had a semi-detached house and a garden.

And, just to make the comparison of housing costs impressive, be it noted that in the country in many parts of England there are small stone houses, of two stories, each with a small garden, that may be rented for the equivalent of 75 cents a week! Before the World War they rented for 50 cents a week. Sleeping quarters on a park bench cost more than that in the United States.

Food Costs Much Lower.

Difference in food costs between the two countries is not so great as the difference in housing costs, but the Englishman has an advantage in providing for his table that will amount to a considerable item in the course of a year. He will pay from ten to fifteen per cent less for his meat, a third less for fish, a half less for potatoes, cabbage, lettuce, and other vegetables, 40 per cent less for butter, and 20 per cent less for cream. His eggs will cost him almost as much as they cost in this country, but even there he will save for or five cents on the dozen.

A few New York and London prices that are cited show beef at 44 cents here and 40 over there; fish, 36 cents and 24; bread, 9 cents and 5; butter, 84 cents and 52; eggs 46 and 42; and as strawberries were in season when the comparison was made it was found that the delectable fruit cost 24 cents a box in New York when it was selling for 12 cents in London.

The two families of three members each, referred to in connection with the rental comparison, also made a comparison of their food budgets. That there were excellent huswives in both families is evidenced by their expenditures. For food and laundry the American family in New York spent $21 a week, while the weekly bill in London was $11. There was a grown son in each family and in neither case was the cost of the luncheons for the men included.

It is not only the working people who have the benefit of low living costs in England. In fact, it is stated that the professional man whose income of from 800 to 900 pounds a year—$4000 to $5000—has relatively a much greater advantage over his colleague in this country with a similar income. The Englishman will own his own home, as a rule, but if he doesn't his rental will not exceed $10 a week. The maid who assists in running the establishment will be delighted with a wage of $150 a year. The family will be able to entertain frequently, go to the theater, and maintain a small car, as luxuries, and will save money every year. No American family can live on such a scale on a similar income and save money.

In the matter of automobiles it is recognized that Americans have a great advantage. Family incomes here make owning of a car possible to families that similarly situated in England could not even think of such extravagance. And the British worker who came over here and visited a large manufacturing plant where a majority of the employees drove up every morning in their own cars would probably require the services of a physician to assist him from recovering from the shock.

CABELL LEADS IN FIRE LOSSES

Fire Marshal Topping's Figures Show Decrease in Past Year.

West Virginia's total loss by fire for the fiscal year ending June 30 was $6,246,563 as compared with $6,588,529 for the year preceding, according to the annual report of Fire Marshal Topping just issued. The decrease amounted to $341,968 or five per cent.

There were 1,219 fires reported to the fire marshal department the last fiscal year, and in 586 of these the loss was entire and in 633 partial. The sound value of the property involved was $14,681,132 and insurance $10,175,552.

While the fire waste in the state was not so great last year, the sacrifice of life, mostly from preventable fire, was appalling. Ninety-one deaths were reported and a large percentage of the victims were children. Other accidents from fire numbered 113.

Cabell led the counties last year with a loss of $876,690, Ohio county was second with a loss of $441,787, and Kanawha county third with a loss of $398,755.

The department during the year made 1,092 inspections, issued 92 orders, investigated 72 suspicious fires and secured 59 indictments and 14 convictions for arson.

The year's fires included 675 dwellings, 174 stores, 62 barns, 58 garages, 41 manufactories, 26 warehouses, 21 hotels, 20 school houses, 19 restaurants, 16 sheds, 14 shops, 12 automobiles, 12 club and lodge rooms, 9 churches, 8 offices, 7 flats, 7 bakeries, 7 dry cleaners, 6 apartment houses, 7 coal tipples, 3 laundries, 2 motion picture theatres, 2 tool houses and a bank.

Of the 1,219 fires, 522 were unknown, 39 of incendiary and 33 of suspicious origin; 181 caught from adjoining premises, 97 from defective flues, 54 from defective electric wires and six from electric irons. Gasoline explosions caused 24 fires, gas explosions 18 and gas jets 15. Fourteen unroofed buildings were struck by lightning. Carelessness with matches was responsible for 16 fires and smokers' carelessness for 18. Twelve fires were due to explosion of kerosene lamps and stoves and 77 to ignition of woodwork from stoves and other heaters. Burning rubbish and children playing with fire caused 24 of the blazes.

The fire marshal's report for last month shows a marked decrease in fire losses, the total for the month reported being $169,61, or 72 per cent less than in June, 1925.

Women Find

Great comfort in this new hygienic pad that discards easily as tissue—no laundry

ON many important counts, women are deserting the old-time "sanitary pad."

There is a new way. A way that multiplies protection. A way, too, that solves the old problem and embarrassment of disposal.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of the old-time sanitary pad. Five times as absorbent! And deodorizes—ends ALL fear of offending.

✓ As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." You ask for it without hesitancy.

Costs only a few cents. Eight in 10 better-class women employ it. Proves old ways an unnecessary risk.

KOTEX

No laundry—discard like tissue

SWIMMER CHOKES TO DEATH

EX-SECRETARY OF WAR WEEKS DIES

Coue Is Dead.

G. F. Baker's Vacation.
Billionaire Quadruplets.

DR. COUE is dead. Every day, in every way, nature's laws work ceaselessly, remorselessly. Parts wear out, in men, as in motors, and no one sells new parts for men.

Merely saying that you are better, in every way, does not make you better; you must do something. But Coue made men imagine that they were getting better, and imagination, which is nine-tenths of life, is the next best thing to reality.

Nature's way is still mysterious to us, as when Bacon, in his "History of Life and Death," marveled at the working of fire.

How this clay is hardened, and how this wax is melted, with one and the same thing, fire?

It drieth earth, stones, wood, cloth and skins, and whatsoever is not liquefiable; and it melteth metals, wax, gums, butter, tallow and the like.

BARON MAURICE DE ROTHSCHILD, of the great international banking family, is deprived of his seat in the French senate, because he spent 1,600,000 francs to get it. There is no suggestion of corruption, but the French decide that 1,600,000 francs is too much.

The French are fussy. One million six hundred thousand francs amounts, in what we call real money, to less than $45,000. Think of insulting the honest political workers of Pennsylvania with that sum.

GEORGE F. BAKER, believed by many to be included in the United States set of billionaire quadruplets—Rockefeller, Mellon, Ford and Baker—Knows how to enjoy life at 86. Sailing for Europe, he gives to each of the employes in his First National bank a present of one year's salary. The total gift, $300,000, is called by Mr. Baker "a selfish gift," his theory being that you enjoy your own vacation more thoroughly, if you know that others are enjoying themselves.

That is better than the old Puritan idea. They believe that the blessed in Heaven were permitted to look down upon the damned, writhing in

DOMINIC PREZZIA, 20, STRANGLES AS HE EATS ORANGE IN PARK POOL

Wellsville Grocer's Son is Found Dead in Seven Feet of Water at Rock Springs After Jumping From Concrete Wall While Bathing Sunday Afternoon.

JOHN BROMBY AND C. E. HECKERT, LIFEGUARD, RECOVER LAD'S BODY

Physician, Using Pulmotor, Works Nearly Two Hours, But Fails to Resuscitate Man Whose Throat is Found Clogged With Food—"Suffocation" is Verdict.

Dominic Prezzia, 20, Wellsburg, W. Va., pool room operator, strangled to death upon a piece of an orange which became lodged in his throat while bathing in the Rock Springs park pool, Chester, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Prezzia's body, standing up-right in about seven feet of water, was recovered by John Bromby, East Liverpool, another bather and C. E. Heckert, Chester, life guard at the pool, a few minutes after the swimmer disappeared. Dr. Charles R. Campbell, Chester, with a pulmotor worked over the victim's body nearly two hours in an effort to resuscitate him but in vain.

At an inquest conducted by Coroner George Arner of Hancock county, W. Va., at the Arner undertaking establishment, Chester, last evening a verdict of "suffocation" was returned. The victim's lungs were found empty of water and his throat clogged with food, indicating he choked to death.

Prezzia, who was manager of a pool room in Wellsburg, owned by his father, Charles Prezzia, grocer at Thirteenth and Commerce streets, Wellsville, was spending the week-end with his parents. He and three companions had gone to the park for a swim.

Girls Discover Tragedy.

Prezzia, who was able to swim, had crossed the pool about 50 feet north of the south end, while his three friends were jumping from the diving board. Friends said he had been eating an orange while sitting on the wall on the west side of the pool before he plunged into the water.

Misses Violet Vorndran and Beatrice Freymark, East Liverpool, who were also sitting on the wall about 10 feet from where Prezzia disappeared, noticed the peculiar position of the youth's body under the water, and screamed for help.

The body was recovered and removed to the steps on the upper side of the pool about two minutes later. Dr. W. D. Graham, Pittsburgh, who was nearby when the body was recovered, attempted to resuscitate Prezzia while a call was sent to the Chester mill for a pulmotor. Dr. Campbell arrived a few minutes later.

The body was removed to the Arner morgue in the Arner ambulance.

Prezzia is survived by his parents and two brothers and four sisters, as follows: Philip, Betty, Virginia, Rose, Anna and John.

Charles Carraher Fined $50, Sent To County Jail

Charles Carraher was fined $50 and costs upon an intoxication charge by Municipal Judge Hanley this morning and ordered committed to the county jail until the fine and costs are paid.

Carraher, who was only recently released from the county jail, was arrested about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after he is alleged to have looted the home of W. M. Hill, Third and College streets. Robert Harker, Newell, noticed Carraher leaving the Hill home with a bag. He stopped him, and opening the bag found it filled with dishes, an alarm clock and other household furnishings.

Harker detained Carraher until Patrolman Haley arrived to take him to jail. Hill, who left town on a fishing trip this morning, refused to charge the prisoner with larceny.

Carl Laemmle Slightly Improved.

LONDON, July 12.—The condition of Carl Laemmle, American motion picture producer, appendicitis victim, was slightly better this morning, physicians announced.

VAUGHN FLEES FROM JAILER

East Liverpool Youth Escapes From Beaver Road Gang.

Charles Vaughn, 22, East Liverpool youth, under a six months sentence for transporting liquor in Beaver county, made his escape from a road gang, working south of Beaver, Pa., Saturday afternoon, police were advised today.

Vaughn, a "trusty", fled while the foreman's attention was directed to another part of the job.

A search was instituted bu the prisoner could not be found.

The fugitive, a son of Mrs. Agnes Vaughn who recently completed a term in Beaver county also for a liquor violation, had served about four months of his six-month sentence. Officials at the Beaver jail said that he would have been liberated within about 30 days. If recaptured, he will be returned to Beaver to serve the balance of his jail term.

Vaughn's fine of $100, imposed by the court at the time that he entered a plea of guilty, is also unpaid. His automobile was sold upon order of the court.

Motorist Denies He Drove Through Red Traffic Block

Entering a plea of not guilty to the charge of violating the traffic ordinance by driving through a red block, B. L. Smith, Wellsville, was held for a hearing before Municipal Judge J. C. Hanley, this afternoon, upon arraignment this morning. Smith was arrested last evening at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway by Captain of Police Conley.

Kenneth Bell, Wellsville, was fined $2 and costs upon a charge of speeding along West Eighth street. Bell was arrested by Special Patrolman Curran at 8 o'clock Saturday night while traveling 40 miles an hour, according to Curran.

18 KNOWN DEAD, BETWEEN 20 AND 30 OTHERS BELIEVED KILLED, 200 INJURED AND $100,000,000 DAMAGE IN NAVAL DEPOT BLAST

By DAVID SENTNER.

DOVER, N. J., July 12. — Sixteen bodies had been recovered from the devastated region between the army base at Picatinny and the naval reservation at Lake Denmark, N. J., today up to 1 o'clock.

The total number of known dead is eighteen. One body was recovered yesterday and a woman victim of the great explosion died in the hospital.

Twenty or more persons are still missing. Damage was estimated at $100,000,000 but some officials believed that the loss might run higher, in view of the widespread property damage.

The list of injured probably will reach hundreds. Preliminary estimates place the total at more than 200.

Among the persons first listed as missing who have been located are Lieut. Commander Brown of Poughkeepsie, and Capt. B. H. Clark of Little Rock, Ark.

This morning 218 United States marines arrived from Quantico, Va., and prepared to enter the danger zone in search for the dead and missing. All Saturday night and Sunday whistling 14-inch and 16-inch shells have been shooting forth and looping about from the burning ruins of the arsenal.

Fearing further explosions, naval officials and other investigators have kept back on the rim of a rough circle drawn about a two-mile radius of Lake Denmark. To enter that "deadline" would have been suicide. For that reason it has been impossible to obtain an accurate check on the dead and missing.

Lightning Strikes Arsenal.

The first explosion occurred at 5:20 Saturday afternoon when lightning struck the arsenal. A terrific blast shook the country for 30 miles around, and throughout the night blast after blast sent terror into the hearts of people in the nearby villages who fled for their lives. Doors and windows were blown out of homes, trees swept away, and automobiles jolted from the roadways.

All day Sunday, on the wasted ground of the valley near Lake Denmark, army and navy officers, state troopers and other rescue workers cautiously made their way forward to the scene but feared to get too near because of the danger of further explosions.

Somewhere in the ruins may be some 20 or 30 service men who have not been heard from since the first explosion.

Resembles War Front.

Conservative estimates this morning placed the property damage at $100,000,000. The damage caused at the navy depot is estimated at $37,000,000. The Picatinny arsenal, a depot of army stores adjoining the naval reservation, was damaged, it is estimated, to the extent of $5,000,000.

Between $150,000 and $200,000 damage was done to the plant of the Replogle Steel company, near Mt. Hope.

Heavy damage was caused in 10 towns in Bergen, Morris and Passaic counties.

The 218 marines from Quantico were awaiting their chance to penetrate the charred, pitted district devastated by the explosions and fires. They will proceed under orders from General Hugh A. Drum.

General Drum, after inspecting the plateau of the reservation from Picatinny peak, and adjoining height, said:

"It's like a scene from the western front. It looks like ground that has been fought over. All vegetation has been swept away."

How soon the marines under Gen. Drum's direction will dare enter the smouldering ruins was a matter of conjecture, although the marines were ready to go at a moment' notice. Some think they will enter the danger zone this morning, some think several days and others at least a week.

Hundreds of Houses in Ruins

The loss of life necessarily will remain a matter of conjecture until it is possible to explore the blackened ruins.

Hundreds of houses in villages near the scene are just masses of ruins today. Many thought an earthquake had occurred when lightning set off the first and biggest explosion Saturday afternoon.

Since then the explosions have been intermittent.

Huge Shells, cans of T. N. T., depth bombs and cases of powder have shot up into the sky in ominous pyrotechnical display.

Shells were still exploding this morning. The marines were held back

DOMINIC PREZZIA, 20, STRANGLES AS HE EATS ORANGE IN PARK POOL

Wellsville Grocer's Son is Found Dead in Seven Feet of Water at Rock Springs After Jumping From Concrete Wall While Bathing Sunday Afternoon.

JOHN BROMBY AND C. E. HECKERT, LIFEGUARD, RECOVER LAD'S BODY.

Physician, Using Pulmotor, Works Nearly Two Hours, But Fails to Resuscitate Man Whose Throat is Found Clogged With Food—"Suffocation" is Verdict.

Dominic Prezzia, 20, Wellsburg, W. Va., pool room operator, strangled to death upon a piece of an orange which became lodged in his throat while bathing in the Rock Springs park pool, Chester, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Prezzia's body, standing up-right in about seven feet of water, was recovered by John Bromby, East Liverpool, another bather and C. E. Heckert, Chester, life guard at the pool, a few minutes after the swimmer disappeared. Dr. Charles R. Campbell, Chester, with a pulmotor worked over the victim's body nearly two hours in an effort to resuscitate him but in vain.

At an inquest conducted by Coroner George Arner of Hancock county, W. Va., at the Arner undertaking establishment, Chester, last evening a verdict of "suffocation" was returned. The victim's lungs were found empty of water and his throat clogged with food, indicating he choked to death.

Prezzia, who was manager of a pool room in Wellsburg, owned by his father, Charles Prezzia, grocer at Thirteenth and Commerce streets, Wellsville, was spending the week-end with his parents. He and three companions had gone to the park for a swim.

Girls Discover Tragedy.

Prezzia, who was able to swim, had crossed the pool about 50 feet north of the south end, while his three friends were jumping from the diving board. Friends said he had been eating an orange while sitting on the wall on the west side of the pool before he plunged into the water.

Misses Violet Vorndran and Beatrice Freymark, East Liverpool, who were also sitting on the wall about 10 feet from where Prezzia disappeared, noticed the peculiar position of the youth's body under the water, and screamed for help.

The body was recovered and removed to the steps on the upper side of the pool about two minutes later. Dr. W. D. Graham, Pittsburgh, who was nearby when the body was recovered, attempted to resuscitate Prezzia while a call was sent to the Chester mill for a pulmotor. Dr. Campbell arrived a few minutes later.

The body was removed to the Arner morgue in the Arner ambulance.

Prezzia is survived by his parents and two brothers and four sisters, as follows: Philip, Betty, Virginia, Rose, Anna and John.

Charles Carraher Fined $50, Sent To County Jail

Charles Carraher was fined $50 and costs upon an intoxication charge by Municipal Judge Hanley this morning and ordered committed to the county jail until the fine and costs are paid.

Carraher, who was only recently released from the county jail, was arrested about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after he is alleged to have looted the home of W. M. Hill, Third and College streets. Robert Harker, Newell, noticed Carraher leaving the Hill home with a bag. He stopped him, and opening the bag found it filled with dishes, an alarm clock and other household furnishings.

Harker detained Carraher until Patrolman Haley arrived to take him to jail. Hill, who left town on a fishing trip this morning, refused to charge the prisoner with larceny.

Carl Laemmle Slightly Improved.

LONDON, July 12.—The condition of Carl Laemmle, American motion picture producer, appendicitis victim, was slightly better this morning, physicians announced.

VAUGHN FLEES FROM JAILER

East Liverpool Youth Escapes From Beaver Road Gang.

Charles Vaughn, 22, East Liverpool youth, under a six months sentence for transporting liquor in Beaver county, made his escape from a road gang, working south of Beaver, Pa., Saturday afternoon, police were advised today.

Vaughn, a "trusty", fled while the foreman's attention was directed to another part of the job.

A search was instituted bu the prisoner could not be found.

The fugitive, a son of Mrs. Agnes Vaughn who recently completed a term in Beaver county also for a liquor violation, had served about four months of his six-month sentence. Officials at the Beaver jail said that he would have been liberated within about 30 days. If recaptured, he will be returned to Beaver to serve the balance of his jail term.

Vaughn's fine of $100, imposed by the court at the time that he entered a plea of guilty, is also unpaid. His automobile was sold upon order of the court.

Motorist Denies He Drove Through Red Traffic Block

Entering a plea of not guilty to the charge of violating the traffic ordinance by driving through a red block, B. L. Smith, Wellsville, was held for a hearing before Municipal Judge J. C. Hanley, this afternoon, upon arraignment this morning. Smith was arrested last evening at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway by Captain of Police Conley.

Kenneth Bell, Wellsville, was fined $2 and costs upon a charge of speeding along West Eighth street. Bell was arrested by Special Patrolman Curran at 8 o'clock Saturday night while traveling 40 miles an hour, according to Curran.

18 KNOWN DEAD, BETWEEN 20 AND 30 OTHERS BELIEVED KILLED, 200 INJURED AND $100,000,000 DAMAGE IN NAVAL DEPOT BLAST

By DAVID SENTNER.

DOVER, N. J., July 12. — Sixteen bodies had been recovered from the devastated region between the army base at Picatinny and the naval reservation at Lake Denmark, N. J., today up to 1 o'clock.

The total number of known dead is eighteen. One body was recovered yesterday and a woman victim of the great explosion died in the hospital.

Twenty or more persons are still missing. Damage was estimated at $100,000,000 but some officials believed that the loss might run higher, in view of the widespread property damage.

The list of injured probably will reach hundreds. Preliminary estimates place the total at more than 200.

Among the persons first listed as missing who have been located are Lieut. Commander Brown of Poughkeepsie, and Capt. B. H. Clark of Little Rock, Ark.

This morning 218 United States marines arrived from Quantico, Va., and prepared to enter the danger zone in search for the dead and missing. All Saturday night and Sunday whistling 14-inch and 16-inch shells have been shooting forth and looping about from the burning ruins of the arsenal.

Fearing further explosions, naval officials and other investigators have kept back on the rim of a rough circle drawn about a two-mile radius of Lake Denmark. To enter that "deadline" would have been suicide. For that reason it has been impossible to obtain an accurate check on the dead and missing.

Lightning Strikes Arsenal.

The first explosion occurred at 5:20 Saturday afternoon when lightning struck the arsenal. A terrific blast shook the country for 30 miles around, and throughout the night blast after blast sent terror into the hearts of people in the nearby villages who fled for their lives. Doors and windows were blown out of homes, trees swept away, and automobiles jolted from the roadways.

All day Sunday, on the wasted ground of the valley near Lake Denmark, army and navy officers, state troopers and other rescue workers cautiously made their way forward to the scene but feared to get too near because of the danger of further explosions.

Somewhere in the ruins may be some 20 or 30 service men who have not been heard from since the first explosion.

Resembles War Front.

Conservative estimates this morning placed the property damage at $100,000,000. The damage caused at the navy depot is estimated at $37,000,000. The Picatinny arsenal, a depot of army stores adjoining the naval reservation, was damaged, it is estimated, to the extent of $5,000,000.

Between $150,000 and $200,000 damage was done to the plant of the Replogle Steel company, near Mt. Hope.

Heavy damage was caused in 10 towns in Bergen, Morris and Passaic counties.

The 218 marines from Quantico were awaiting their chance to penetrate the charred, pitted district devastated by the explosions and fires. They will proceed under orders from General Hugh A. Drum.

General Drum, after inspecting the plateau of the reservation from Picatinny peak, and adjoining height, said:

"It's like a scene from the western front. It looks like ground that has been fought over. All vegetation has been swept away."

How soon the marines under Gen. Drum's direction will dare enter the smouldering ruins was a matter of conjecture, although the marines were ready to go at a moment' notice. Some think they will enter the danger zone this morning, some think several days and others at least a week.

Hundreds of Houses in Ruins

The loss of life necessarily will remain a matter of conjecture until it is possible to explore the blackened ruins.

Hundreds of houses in villages near the scene are just masses of ruins today. Many thought an earthquake had occurred when lightning set off the first and biggest explosion Saturday afternoon.

Since then the explosions have been intermittent.

Huge Shells, cans of T. N. T., depth bombs and cases of powder have shot up into the sky in ominous pyrotechnical display.

Shells were still exploding this morning. The marines were held back

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Bee and Lou are modern girls sharing a Greenwich Village apartment. Bee is an actress, at present in the chorus, but keeping a stiff upper lip and a fond hope of success. Into the Village comes Delia, frail poetess of New England, seeking freedom from the repressions of her home. And Bee, a school chum of the freedom-seeker, invites her to share their apartment. Delia is determined to win through to the freedom she came for. Before the first evening is well under way Delia has met Wilbur, a young artist who is suffering from "too much mother" and whom Lou has undertaken to rescue; and Leslie, intimate of Lou; and Arthur Rockwell the poet whose work Delia knows and admires; and various others of the Village crowd. For there is a gay party in the little apartment. As the festivities break up Leslie, frankly in love with Lou, protests on her putting Wilbur up at her apartment. She holds to her decision to keep the young artist under guard. The next morning the girls awake with a "morning after the night before" feeling. During a conversation with the other two, Delia learns that Arthur, who has taken a fancy to her, is unscrupulous. Yet she persists in yielding to his fascinations. In the afternoon, by appointment, she goes to his rooms in the village.

Bee, meanwhile, meets Fred, a young and successful business man who has ben urging her to marry him. He fairly pleads with her, but she has her own ideas about marriage which do not conform to Fred's.

CHAPTER TWELVE.

"I mustn't forget what really brought me here, Fred," said Bee. "You see, an old college chum of mine, Delia Bradley, turned up yesterday. I've got to find a job for her. I knew it's a nuisance to bother you about a thing like that, but I must break through with it somewhere. Secretarial work. Plenty of experience up in Worcester. A college education. Publishes verse in good magazines. A dreamer, but intelligent. Shy. Puritan inhibitions and all."

He scribbled a name on a card and tossed it across the table. "Have her see him tomorrow, Mr. Lane. Refer to me. Ought to be something for her in Aero Accessories. College education, eh! Maybe she can actually spell. Wouldn't that be great!"

"Would it?" Bee began to believe that she had headed him around nicely.

"And punctuate! Be corking if she could punctuate! You don't know the queer fruit of the business schools that we have to put up with in New York."

"I can tell you a lot more about Delia, Fred. She's really—"

He wasn't listening, but sipped a fresh glass of the wine and stared up at an exotic mural painting in greens, purples, blues, yellows and chashing reds. The business was over almost before she had begun it. Delia was to see Mr. Lane. That was that.

The first thing that came into her head to say was: "Fred, aren't you—well, really drinking quite a lot?" So she said it.

But he dismissed this thought as easily and utterly as he had dismissed the little matter of Delia. "More than I used to, yes. But only after hours, never during the day. I told you I've felt reckless. That's so. Nights are the lonely time. But there's not the slightest danger of my overdoing it, if that's what's on your mind. Marry me, and I'll quit now. Say the word, Bee—." He had his glass up; she had pushed hers away. "Say you'll marry me within a year, and I'll pour this into the ice-bucket."

He watched her for a sign. She couldn't give it. "All right, then; I'll pour it into myself." Which he did.

Bee's lips drew more tightly together. She was stirred, and a little hurt, as well. She thought him not quite fair. Or was all fair?

"I've told you exactly how I feel Fred."

"No, you haven't." He was smiling a little, and slowly shaking his head. "No—you—haven't!"

"But I have, Fred! I've tried to make you see—"

"Oh, you've tried, fair enough. I'm not questioning your honesty, child. Only your intelligence."

"Well, that's rather—"

"How could you tell me exactly how you feel? That's nonsense, of course."

"It isn't nonsense, Fred."

"Certainly it is. All you've told me is what you will or wont make up your mind to do. We've had a few moderately intimate moments, you and I. You must have felt all sorts of things. I'm sure I have."

"Why, naturally, in that sense—"

"Surely you have moods."

"Of course, Fred."

"Funny business. I'd like to know what the devil it's all about. Really, I mean. We'll say I'm in love with you. I am, of course. Crazy about you. The thought of you excites me, stirs a desire to possess you. Shut you away. It's the upsetting old instinct that's put there to keep the race alive, regardless. We're nothing but victims of its ravages. We're nothing! Walk through Times Square any night and look at the faces. Thousands and thousands of 'em. Human critters. Some of 'em educated, whatever that is! Some of 'em even well-bred. But what are they thinking about? All of 'em, what are they thinking? Just one thing. She's thinking about him, and he's thinking about her. Or at least about them!"

"At least, Fred, you can understand why I wont let my life be governed by my nerve-centers—where the moods come from."

"Can you help it? Can any of us help it?"

"If I didn't think so," Bee answered, "I'd go back home tonight."

"I wonder. You folks down there in the Village seem to go about life on the basis that the individual—the little separate ego—is important."

"Isn't he?"

"I rather think not. He didn't seem very important in the war."

"Oh, the war—"

"And he doesn't seem so damn' important in business.'

'But business—"

"Business, dear Bee, is the form the human struggle for survival takes at present. It's Life. It's exactly Life.'

"A pretty low form."

"Perhaps. Perhaps not. Rather a big thing to generalize about offhand. Oh,"—he lifted a firm hand,—"I know the quaint jargon of the Village. The important things are batiks and samovars and little poems."

"Art is pretty important, Fred."

"Oh, sure!"

"You can't have a civilization without it. Without the spirit of it. The final fine flower of business appears to be the Rotary."

"That's partly true—only partly. But I didn't set out really to start a silly argument, Beee. I'm groping around in my mind. Here I am, crazy about you."

"Now please, Fred—"

"Oh, don't worry. I'm thinking it out. Trying to. I've about come to the conclusion that the individual doesn't matter a damn, except as he contributes service. What's a woman's greatest gift? Isn't it mothering?"

"But Fred, this isn't 1880!"

"Well, isn't it? Mothering young citizens. Mothering a man. Isn't it the one thing she can do that a man can't? Isn't it the finest thing in life?"

Somewhat nervously Bee hummed the concluding line of a song that had amused them all—"Don't swat your mother. It's mean."

"Oh," said he, "of course all that primitive, elemental truth is laughed out of the Village. Let's say that I'm Victorian."

"Like most arguments,' she observed, interrupting him, "it appears to come down to a question of what I think and what you think. I'm sorry to say that I've got to run, Fred. I'll walk over to the subway."

"You'll do nothing of the sort."

"But, Fred, I really want the exercise."

"Nothing doing! Look here, Bee. I'm going to get down to brass tacks. I'm in a queer fix, really. Riding the big wave. Money coming easy. A big time future ahead. And yet the whole damn thing's as empty as a shell. I simply don't react to it. I'm empty, hollow. My imagination's set on a little girl that's got her mind set on fighting the world independently. Sometimes I think it may prove too much for me. I may just blow up. Thrown cheap women at you. Go to hell, maybe. I don't know."

Miniature Musical Comedy And Feature Film At Ceramic

Dancing and Good Music Offered With Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez in "Not So Long Ago."

Arthur Spizzi's "Northland Frolics," a miniature musical comedy unit, is the metropolitan attraction at the Ceramic theatre today, opening a three-day engagement with matinees.

This pretty bit of entertainment with colorful dancing and good music sets off another all-star cinema program, the feature of which is the Sidney Olcott production," "Not So Long Ago," in which Ricardo Cortez and Betty Bronson are the stars.

As an appetizer, the program includes the comedy, "Page Me" in which Bobby Vernon has the stellar role; International Newsreel and Aesop's Fables.

There is a little touch of Broadway in "Northland Frolics," featuring Cort and Cooley, an eccentric comedy male dancing team; Witt and Berg, instrumentalists; Three Lubal Girls' dancers and Virginia Webster. Miss Webster, who is a pianist and possesses a pleasing voice, has held the leading roles in the Harrisburg Civil Opera company's productions.

The story of "Not So Long Ago," adapted for the screen by Violet Clark from the Broadway stage hit of the same name by Arthur Richman, is a romantic comedy of New York in 1850. The heroine of the story (Betty Bronson) is a poor but pretty girl of a very romantic turn of mind. The daughter of an inventor, she works as seamstress in the home of the Ballards, very rich people.

Betty's desire to impress her girl friends leads her to tell them that Billy Ballard (Cortez), son and heir of her employers, is deeply in love with her. In reality, Billy doesn't know she exists. Later they meet and actually do fall in love and there are complications galore.

A feature of the production is a unique race between the first "horseless carriage" and Laurence Wheat, who plays the bragart, Sam Robinson, who is also in love with Betty. If he wins, Betty has promised to marry him. If he doesn't, it means success for her father's invention.

Ukraine Leaders Move To Part From Soviets; Controversy is Bitter

MOSCOW.—Development of a bitter controversy between Moscow and Kharkov, capital of the Ukraine, reveals evidence that no complete success has met the Soviet's attempts to solve the question of national minorities by giving autonomy to each national group.

It is now admitted that strong elements in the Ukraine are working for separation from the Soviet Union. The root of the trouble seems to be the over-developed patriotism of the Ukrainans, resulting from their sudden freedom the bonds imposed by the Russian autocracy.

"Oh, don't worry. I'm thinking it out. Trying to. I've about come to the conclusion that the individual doesn't matter a damn, except as he contributes service. What's a woman's greatest gift? Isn't it mothering?"

"But Fred, this isn't 1880!"

"Well, isn't it? Mothering young citizens. Mothering a man. Isn't it the one thing she can do that a man can't? Isn't it the finest thing in life?"

Somewhat nervously Bee hummed the concluding line of a song that had amused them all—"Don't swat your mother. It's mean."

"Oh," said he, "of course all that primitive, elemental truth is laughed out of the Village. Let's say that I'm Victorian."

"Like most arguments,' she observed, interrupting him, "it appears to come down to a question of what I think and what you think. I'm sorry to say that I've got to run, Fred. I'll walk over to the subway."

"You'll do nothing of the sort."

"But, Fred, I really want the exercise."

"Nothing doing! Look here, Bee, I'm going to get down to brass tacks. I'm in a queer fix, really. Riding the big wave. Money coming easy. A big time future ahead. And yet the whole damn thing's as empty as a shell. I simply don't react to it. I'm empty, hollow. My imagination's set on a little girl that's got her mind set on fighting the world independently. Sometimes I think it may prove too much for me. I may just blow up. Thrown cheap women at you. Go to hell, maybe. I don't know."

Miniature Musical Comedy And Feature Film At Ceramic

Dancing and Good Music Offered With Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez in "Not So Long Ago."

Arthur Spizzi's "Northland Frolics," a miniature musical comedy unit, is the metropolitan attraction at the Ceramic theatre today, opening a three-day engagement with matinees.

This pretty bit of entertainment with colorful dancing and good music sets off another all-star cinema program, the feature of which is the Sidney Olcott production," "Not So Long Ago," in which Ricardo Cortez and Betty Bronson are the stars.

As an appetizer, the program includes the comedy, "Page Me" in which Bobby Vernon has the stellar role; International Newsreel and Aesop's Fables.

There is a little touch of Broadway in "Northland Frolics," featuring Cart and Cooley, an eccentric comedy male dancing team; Witt and Berg, instrumentalists; Three Lubal Girls' dancers and Virginia Webster. Miss Webster, who is a pianist and possesses a pleasing voice, has held the leading roles in the Harrisburg Civil Opera company's productions.

The story of "Not So Long Ago," adapted for the screen by Violet Clark from the Broadway stage hit of the same name by Arthur Richman, is a romantic comedy of New York in 1850. The heroine of the story (Betty Bronson) is a poor but pretty girl of a very romantic turn of mind. The daughter of an inventor, she works as seamstress in the home of the Ballards, very rich people.

Betty's desire to impress her girl friends leads her to tell them that Billy Ballard (Cortez), son and heir of her employers, is deeply in love with her. In reality, Billy doesn't know she exists. Later they meet and actually do fall in love and there are complications galore.

A feature of the production is a unique race between the first "horseless carriage" and Laurence Wheat, who plays the bragart, Sam Robinson, who is also in love with Betty. If he wins, Betty has promised to marry him. If he doesn't, it means success for her father's invention.

Ukraine Leaders Move To Part From Soviets; Controversy is Bitter

MOSCOW.—Development of a bitter controversy between Moscow and Kharkov, capital of the Ukraine, reveals evidence that no complete success has met the Soviet's attempts to solve the question of national minorities by giving autonomy to each national group.

It is now admitted that strong elements in the Ukraine are working for separation from the Soviet Union. The root of the trouble seems to be the over-developed patriotism of the Ukrainans, resulting from their sudden freedom the bonds imposed by the Russian autocracy.

THREE GAMES FOR LOCAL NINE

Play K. T. K. Today in First Clash of Second Half.

Wellsville's re-organized City Industrial Baseball league club goes into action this evening at Central park in their initial contest of the second half schedule, playing the strong K. T. K. outfit.

Not disheartened by their cellar berth in the loop at the close of the initial section of the playing schedule, the locals, under new management, expect to climb a few notches within the next few weeks and at least make some of the pace setters step.

The locals will not want for action during the inaugural week of the final drive, having been carded for no less than three contests.

On Tuesday night they will clash with K. T. K. again, this time at Columbian park, East Liverpool.

On Thursday they will tackle Laughlin, the champion club of the first half, at Newell.

Women Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Polls For August Primaries Open

Polls for the August 10 primaries, when electors will select Republican and Democratic nominees for state, district and county offices for the final heat in November, were formally opened in Columbiana county today as election supervisors began to comply with absent voters' requests for ballots.

Enfranchised men and women who now are away, or expect to be absent from their home precincts on election day, have the right to exercise the suffrage privilege by mail not earlier than 30 days prior to the primaries or general election. The deadline for acceptance of applications is the third day prior to balloting day, or not later than Saturday, August 7.

This law, enacted primarily for men who were called into the military service during 1917, when America entered the World war, removes the chief excuse of qualified electors for failure to perform their duty as citizens. Whether in Portland, Oregon, or Portland, Maine, a Columbiana county voter does not disfranchise himself.

Electors who receive ballots under the provisions of this law must mark them in the presence of an election board official or notary public in the state in which the applicant is a visitor, and then forward them to his county board. These ballots are counted by precinct officers on election day.

If you expect to be absent from your home precinct on primary day, apply for ballots. Don't deprive yourself of a voice in the selection of your party's ticket for the November election.

Protection For Empty Houses

The police department of some cities are urging prospective vacationers to notify the chief of police in writing, giving their house address and the length of time they expect to be out of town. The idea is to protect the house from robbers and other perils.

With such notification, the various policemen on duty regularly try doors and observe the condition of the place. At the slighest sign of entry or disturbance they will investigate. One or two shades should be left up so that the patrolman can look into the house. Thieves like lowered shades.

Some people tempt burglars, the police say, by leaving a note on the door saying they will be gone for a month or a week or whatever the period is.

Perhaps few citizens realize that they could have such service from the police department. It ought to be made more widely known. A word to the wise householder should be sufficient and, police protection or not, it is well to put valuable silver and jewelry into a safety deposit vault, right along with shutting off the water. These few simple precautions insure a happier homecoming.

Open Wells Banned

"Use of open wells from which water is drawn by means of a rope and bucket is hereby prohibited."

With these cruel words the board of health of Sacramento, Cal., outlaws the "old oaken bucket." It will be a hard blow to many a sentimental grown-up, with pleasant memories of the open well of his youth and with a fine, poetical regard for "the moss-covered bucket" that slaked his youthful thirst.

It may have been all right, too, in olden days. There may not have been so many disease germs floating around then, and lurking in the moss on that venerable bucket to attack the unwary drinker. Yet we can't be too sure about that, for by all accounts there was a sad mortality rate in past generations, and well buckets may have been, many a time, the means of spreading typhoid and other epidemics that devastated whole villages and countrysides.

In this present age, anyway, medical science has proved that open wells are likely to be polluted, and the buckets in them are mischievous germ-carriers. Sacramento sets a good example.

Wells are all right if the sources of their water are not contaminated, and if they are kept closed at the top. Surface water is always to be avoided, doctors say, for fear of germs. If the water is drawn from a sufficient depth, if the well is sealed at the top and no dirt of any kind is allowed to enter, very well. All other wells are doubtful, and therefore to be avoided.

Child Adoption Pays

A discussion about child adoption has been running in a Canadian newspaper. Among those who have adopted youngsters the opinion seems to be unanimous that it is wholly worth while, that the adopted children are just as beloved and just as great a blessing and, under equally sound home training, turn out just as well as do "own children."

The biggest problem in adoption seems to be the neighborhood busy-body who labors under the delusion that there is something awfully peculiar about an adopted child. This pest may be an adult who suspects some unpleasant circumstances somewhere to be ferreted out and gossiped about and who prophesies unpleasant results. Or he may be some silly school child who taunts the adopted child. These pests may be largely overcome by telling the child the truth while showing him how much he is also loved and wanted.

In a world where there are so many homes needing children and so many children needing homes, and where there are now adequate means of bringing the two together happily and successfully, it ought to be possible to develop a more normal attitude toward adoption.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 12.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up betimes and breakfasted on stewed prunes and reflected how this elegant dish suffered in popularity from boarding house puns. And K. Kitchen dropped in, and looking at the prunes, said "What! No artichokes!"

So to walk and saw Edgar Selwyn and his pretty bride and also Pierre Van Passen, the scrivener, who has been in Poland and has articled to write for newspapers from European centers. And saw a wrist watch bearing a price I thought to be $50 and about to buy when the clerk said $500 and I said "Oh" and walked away in such confusion I opened a door to a closet.

It came suddenly to rain and I stood at the curb signalling taxis until drenched and when one stopped I opened the door and a lady rushed out from a store saying "This is mine!" and rode away. So home and to bed.

In mid-town streets a familiar figure is a man who ambles about on stilts 10 feet high wearing advertising banners front and back for some movie, optical house of restaurant.

The other morning two gentlemen were leaving a theatrical club for a whiff of fresh air after a hectic night. Nerves were a bit jumpy. One finally remarked consolingly: "This is exactly what we needed. I feel fine."

The other happened to glance across the street as the man on stilts was casually straddling a contractor's street hut in his promenade.

"You might feel all right,' he said with a quick gasp, "but I'm in a hell of a fix.

Fortune tellers have touts who mingle among the credulous drumming up clients in a subtle way. The cafes and night clubs are chief fields of operation. They discuss a certain sorcerer for the benefit of listeners at the next table, winding up the eulogy by giving the name and address. One of the stories, frequently overheard, was that a certain actor was going to marry a very rich woman. A fortune teller had told him so. He did but he had never been to a fortune teller in his life, although through the subtle touting the lady fortune teller reaped a whirlwind of business.

In certain remote districts New York still has those undernourished looking youths with ladders who light street lamps. They seem to have stepped from the pages of Horatio Alger, Jr., books, where tattered heroes, stung by the lash of poverty, win success and marry the banker's daughter.

There is something interesting about the "atmosphere girls" in the Greenwich Village cafes and coffee houses. Each place has one or two. They have a wickedly knowing air, eat up cigarets with a few quick inhales, and can discuss all the current isms. Some wear paint-flecked smocks and sandals to heighten the studio effect. They are usually known by first names, such as Colette, Yvonne or Vera. It is their job to be off-stage actresses and give Elmer Finch, a lonely buyer, the idea the Village lives and loves lightly. Like straying husbands, they know what it is to be misunderstood. They have suffered for Art. Which consists chiefly in crying some sufficiently "crocked" table companion out of a week's rent or a $40 dress toward which by scrimping and starving they have been only able to save $5.

New York dressmakers are trying desperately to swing fashion into flowery paths. It is their wail that woman's dress has reached the simplicity of a mere uniform and needs more individuality. Waistlines, longer skirts and more frills are being urged.

HASKIN'S LETTER

Living Costs In England.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—Figures recently made available here in a comparison of living costs in England and in the United States indicate that money goes almost as far on the other side of the Atlantic at the present time as it did in this country in the days when, as tradition has it, George Washington threw a dollar across the Potomac.

British workers with their relatively low wages, many of them receiving a weekly wage that barely equals a day's pay of an American mechanic, are not at such a disadvantage as the disparity in earnings would seem to show. They get little money in comparison with what American workers receive, but they get a great deal more for their money when it comes to standing off the wolf.

Twelve dollars a week would not be regarded as a living wage by any American worker. The unskilled laborer receives far more than that, usually at least twice that much, and as a rule his earnings are supplemented by those of at least one other member of his family. Even then such wage earners in this country admittedly are hard put to it to make both ends meet.

Consider, then, the surprising statement that there are thousands of happy British homes supported on a wage of $12 a week and many maintained comfortably on less.

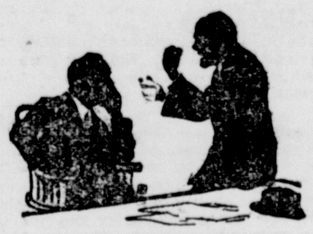

The first item in the cost of living anywhere is rent or housing, and it is in this that the most striking difference is found between costs in England and in the United States. Two dollars a week is the average rent paid by British working men's families, according to the report of an investigation that covered the entire country, and that is for families of five or more. It is not necessary to quote rental figures in the United States to show the great advantage the British worker has in this item of his living budget. The American worker can house a family of five for four or five times the average rental of his English cousins is fortunate, and it is doubtful whether a nation-wide survey in this country would disclose a single instance of a family of five securing anything approximating adequate living quarters for two dollars a week.

In fact, employers, economists, and philanthropists who are seeking to solve the housing problem in this country have set as the mark of the utmost that can be accomplished in a city such as New York rentals of from eight to ten dollars per room per month—per room, and not per house that will shelter a family of five.

Cheap Birmingham Rents.

Within five miles of the center of Birmingham, one of the great industrial cities of England, there is at Bourneville one of the first garden city schemes inaugurated in that country. There the highest rent for model houses situated in a model community is with a few exceptions $2.50 per week and more than one-half of the houses are rented for less than $2 per week. Tenants, in the latter cases, must pay the local taxes, but that adds comparatively little to

HOW TO BEAT THE SYSTEM.

"Tiny" Maxwell is a sporting writer in Philadelphia. He is called "Tiny" because he is about the size of a two ton tractor. He has a ready wit, as his readers will testify.

Because he is an expert at football and also because back in his college days he was a gridiron star of magnitude, Mr. Maxwell frequently is called upon in the season to referee games along the Eastern Seaboard.

One afternoon last fall he was officiating at a match between Georgetown, which, as everybody knows, is a Catholic institution, and a team representing a Southern university. In an interval one of the Southern players limped up to Maxwell.

"Mr. Referee," he said, "I want to make a protest. There's one of those Georgetown men that seems to have a grudge against me. Every time we two get in a scrimmage together he bites me Yes, sir, he just hauls off and bites me. I don't want to start any rough house stuff, but I'm getting good and tired of having that big Irishman biting on me. What had I better do?"

"I should advise," said Tiny, "that you play him on Fridays."

HOW TO BEAT THE SYSTEM.

"Tiny" Maxwell is a sporting writer in Philadelphia. He is called "Tiny" because he is about the size of a two ton tractor. He has a ready wit, as his readers will testify.

Because he is an expert at football and also because back in his college days he was a gridiron star of magnitude, Mr. Maxwell frequently is called upon in the season to referee games along the Eastern Seaboard.

One afternoon last fall he was officiating at a match between Georgetown, which, as everybody knows, is a Catholic institution, and a team representing a Southern university. In an interval one of the Southern players limped up to Maxwell.

"Mr. Referee," he said, "I want to make a protest. There's one of those Georgetown men that seems to have a grudge against me. Every time we two get in a scrimmage together he bites me. Yes, sir, he just hauls off and bites me. I don't want to start any rough house stuff, but I'm getting good and tired of having that big Irishman biting on me. What had I better do?"

"I should advise," said Tiny, "that you play him on Fridays."

TWO ROBBERS USE POKER TO SUBDUE WOMAN

Mrs. Robert Myers, Near Rogers, is Attacked.

JEWELRY STOLEN

Victim Beaten Into Unconsciousness While Husband is Absent.

Columbiana county authorities today were searching for two unidentified men, who ransacked the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Myers, on the Millrock road, near Rogers, early Saturday afternoon, after brutally beating Mrs. Myers over the head with a poker. The robbers escaped with a diamond and pearl lavallier with a watch chain and a man's lodge ring.

Mrs. Myers was preparing to iron when the two men entered the kitchen and struck her over the head with a poker. While she was unconscious they searched the house. Three of the woman's children were asleep in the up-stairs of the house at the time of the assault and robbery. The fourth was with his mother but was not harmed by the strangers.

When Mrs. Myers regained consciousness an hour or more after the men had left the house, Sheriff Wright was notified. He hurried to the scene but could find no trace of the burglars. Neighbors reported having seen two men leaving the farm. The woman sustained a deep scalp wound as a result of the blow.

Her husband was working on a farm near Fairfield at the time of the attack.

MR. AVERESCU, in charge of Rumanian affair, plans to adjust his country's financial troubles by paper money expansion. His idea is to print a billion lei, and use them to buy American dollars and British pounds. The idea is all right, if anybody can be pursuaded to trade real money for the product of a lei printing machine.

MR. AVERESCU also plans to invite participation of American capital in the development of Rumania.

That country's chances of enlisting American support would be better had Rumania retained Bibesco as Rumanian minister at Washington. When Rumania lost Bibesco's services here, it lost one of the most popular and earnest of the foreign representatives.

And many Americans resent the abrupt withdrawal of a minister who was most welcome.

BAD news is the appearance of the Mexican cotton flea in several southern states. The government has warned cotton planters of the new danger, and will doubtless do more than issue warnings.

A menace to one of the nation's greatest sources of wealth threatens the whole country and is as much of the nation's business as the landing of an enemy army.

FARMERS of northern Louisiana meet the danger by engaging airplanes to dust the growing cotton with sulphur. Even in fighting insect life, the airplane is the only weapon.

Government should aid in that fight from the air and it really ought to take a serious interest in airplane production.

COMMANDER BYRD, first class American and first human being to fly over the north pole, told Wall Street men, who entertained him, that he once planned to try his luck in Wall Street. Only lack of cash held him back.

Many pale, thin ghosts that haunt New street and the back door of the stock exchange at night would advise Byrd to stick to the north pole—a much safter resort.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN asked Byrd, who called at his office, what the chances were for a branch bank at the pole. Byrd replied that Eskimos care nothing for money, the bank would have to deal in red beads. Mr. Morgan was not tempted.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER believes in seeing for himself. He has actually drilled and "brought in" in a good oil well inside the arctic. It is plugged up, held in reserve, waiting for better transportation facilities. You might call that foresight.

IT IS estimated that the United States will produce 710,000,000 barrels of oil this year, nearly seven barrels for every man, woman and child.

Oil variously used, represents power and efficiency. And civilization today depends on production of energy, apart from human labor, as in olden times it depended on slave labor before machinery was perfected.

Every barrel of oil, every horsepower of steam or electricity ought to mean greater freedom for human beings.

Ex-Secretary of War

direct descendant of Leonard Weeks, one of the New Hampshire pioneers.

In the hills of the Granite state, across the boundary line from Vermont where Calvin Coolidge was reared, there were instilled in him as a boy, the Yankee characteristics of shrewdness and common sense that enabled him to attain the pinacle of sucess.

A revered judge, the elder Weeks taught the future cabinet member at night, after the day's farm chores were done, and at the age of 17 John Wingate Weeks branched forth as a teacher in the district school.

Later, while attending Dartmouth college, Weeks grasped an opportunity to enter the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and served two years as a midshipman after graduating.

Engages in Brokerage Business.

At that time, however, the government had far more officers than ships and the number of commissions was cut down, Weeks returning to civilian life.

He then went to Florida and took a job running out lines of old Spanish grants. It was there that he met, wooed and married Miss Martha A. Sinclair, daughter of Charles A. Sinclair, partner of Frank Jones, famous brewer.

Shortly after, acting on a friend's "tip," Weeks came to Boston, and, although knowing nothing of the stock brokerage business, he managed to borrow enough money to buy a partnership in a firm that did a flourishing trade as Hornblower & Weeks.

Weeks served in the Spanish-American war as a captain in command of the second division, auxiliary United States naval force on the Atlantic coast, and at the time of his death today he was a reserve admiral in the navy.

It was in Newton, Mass., 26 years ago, that Weeks first tasted political He liked it, became a candidate for life, winning a contest for alderman, mayor, and was elected.

Smitten with political ambition, Weeks then launched a campaign for congress from the Twelfth district and he was elected to the fifty-ninth congress, serving right through to the sixty-third congress when he resigned to take his seat in the United States senate.

While still a senator, in 1916, Weeks was strongly in favor with certain elements in the Republican party for the presidential nomination that ultimately went to Charles Evans Hughes.

In 1919 he retired from the senate and devoted himself almost exclusively to his political party until his appointment to the cabinet by the late President Harding.

TOWN DESERTED AFTER BLAST

Mount Hope, N. J., Looks Like Place on War Front.

MOUNT HOPE, N. J., July 12. — This village, which lies in the shadow of Lake Denmark, N. J., scene of the terrific arsenal explosion, is as deserted as a town on the western front after an invasion.

The entire populace has departed. All that are here are newcomers—those on duty.

From a distance newspaper men and army officers peer cautiously over the edge of hills, below which lies a stretch of valley, pitted with shell holes exactly like those that flecked the battlefields of France.

Some of the holes are deep enough to allow four or five persons to stand without crowding.

Now and then shells were bursting upon this valley this morning smoke from a hundred burning spots drifted across the valley.

All was silent. Not a soul moved across this zone of danger. Trees were split. The grass was burned brown in huge spots. Remnants of shells that had exploded with heavy detonations were strewn about. Some of them still smouldering.

Two Bandits Stage Triple Murder Near Spot in Cicero, Ill., Where Gangsters Killed "Hanging Prosecutor."

CHICAGO, July 12. — A Sunday school superintendent, his fiancee and a taxicab driver were shot and killed by two bandits in Cicero, West Chicago suburb, early today. The scene of the triple murder was within a stone's throw of the spot where several months ago Assistant State's Attorney William McSwiggin and two companions were shot to death.

One of the bandits was captured and is said to have confessed his part in the crime.

The dead are:

Fred Heine, 45, Sunday school superintendent of Salem Evangelical church.

Miss Marie Blang, 23, Heine's fiancee.

Ludwig Rose, 24, taxicab driver.

The couple were slain as they sat in an automobile in front of Miss Blang's home. Rose died in the county hospital three hours after the shooting. He said the bandit pair hired him and told him to drive to a certain address. When they neared the automobile occupied by Heine and Miss Blang they commanded him to stop.

They robbed Rose, stripped him of his uniform and attempted to take his car. When he objected they shot him through the stomach. He said he heard the shots that killed Heine and Miss Blang as he lay in the street a block away.

The captured bandit gave his name as Thomas McWain. He said he did not know his companion's name as they had met only four days before. He said the fugitive bandit did all the shooting.

"4—$100,000.00 appropriation to be used for the purpose of investigating and recovering, if possible, millions of dollars of the people's finances that have been lost, strayed or stolen since 1920, through incompetency and reckless disregard for the people's rights.

"5—Fifty per cent reduction in the number of state employes and a 25 per cent, salary increase for the remaining half, thereby securing competent help that can be held mentally and morally responsible for their official acts at a saving of millions of dollars for the taxpayers of Ohio.

"6—Favoring any legislation that will make the farmer and laborer more prosperous and comfortable, for the reason that if the farmer and laborer are prosperous, all other elements of society will not need to worry.

"7—Favoring higher wages and shorter hours for women working in factories or doing other laborious work.

"8—Abolition of the state pardon board and the enactment of a statute empowering the governor to appoint a local pardon board in each county of two members, one to be appointed from each of the two dominant political parties, thereby giving the poor man an equal opportunity with the rich for the benefit of clemency, which would place the matter in the hands of local men in each county who are in closer touch with the character of a convict seeking relief, thereby making it harder for the unworthy to be released and easier for those that are worthy."

Beatty spent the night here and left this morning for Cincinnati, where, he told newspaper men, he will speak at a mass meeting in Music hall tonight. He said he would return to East Liverpool Wednesday morning.

from entering the ruins because of this fact, and also because it is known that on the navy side of the arsenal there still is a big powder magazine which hasn't gone off, and that on the army side of the reservation are stored some 400 aerial bombs—the heaviest type of explosives known—as well as a considerable amount of T. N. T. and other explosives.

Thousands of curious sought to get close to the scene but were backed by state troopers. Traffic in all directions two miles from the scene was being diverted.

A field hospital has been established outside the zone of fire. Doctors and nurses from nearby cities and towns and from New York are busy taking care of the wounded.

LAKE DENMARK, N. J., July 12.—More explosions are feared today in the disaster of the naval ammunition depot here and the partial destruction of the army arsenal at Picatinny. Precautions have been taken to prevent a catastrophe at the army depot. Fires are still raging and may cause new detonations with further loss of human life.

Countryside Is Rocked.

The first explosion occurred late Saturday and was followed by a series of blasts which rocked the countryside, turning the district into a No Man's Land.

If the wind changes its course it is feared the huge arsenal at Picatinny will be set ablaze from sparks drifting across the gully that separates the army and naval stations.

The first explosion occurred when a lightning bolt struck a quantity of ammunition at the navy base. A minute later there was another, and the from the depot that sheltered the depth bombs, weapons filled with TNT and stored for use against enemy submarines.

There was a terrific blast. A minute later there was nother, and the third came shortly after 8 o'clock. Bombs from the navy depot had found some of the army mazagines, and the shells were flying.

Windows were broken in an area 30 miles around. People believed that an earthquake had occurred.

3,000 Persons Homeless.

Groupes of marines were to explore the shattered countryside for the dead following teh arrival of five companies of the fifth regiment of marines from Quantico, Va. The detachment numbered 204 officers and men.

The marines arrived from the Virginia station on a special train. Carrying emergency rations and full war time equipment, they took over police duty at the wrecked naval post.

Scenes of horror are scattered in the wake of the terrific explosion that followed the destruction of a TNT magazine by lightning.

Relief among stricken civilians in the swept area, which covers 10 towns, is being pushed by the Red Cross and other agencies. More than 3,000 persons have been rendered homeless, it is estimated.

A field hospital has been established outside the zone of fire. Bursting of shells add to the task of assisting the thousands of refugees.

Six bodies were reported seen early today amid the shell craters and ruins by physicians in an advanced first aid post. The bodies wil be recovered as quickly as it is possible to penetrate the barrage.

Six Towns Deserted.

A state forest ranger from Morristown, who passed Lake Denmark, saw a charred body in the water. Three marines had been bathing in the lake just before the explosion and it is believed all perished.

Six towns are deserted. The desolation recalls the war-town villages in France. The towns are Marcella, Hibbernia, Longwood, Mud Lane, Mount Hope and Spicerstown. Mount Hope is a complete ruin and the property damage to the others is immense.

Roads in the vichity of the swept district are patrolled by soldiers, sailors, marines and state troopers. Thousands of sightseers from a dozen states have flocked to the scene of the catastrophe. They are barred from close approach.

Inspection of the wrecked naval station was made by Secretary of War Davis.

He expressed his admiration of the assistance which had been rendered the stricken area by the officers of the New York and New Jersey police forces, not only immediately following the disaster, but since that time, in policing and regulating traffic on the roads.

TWO ROBBERS USE POKER TO SUBDUE WOMAN

Mrs. Robert Myers, Near Rogers, is Attacked.

JEWELRY STOLEN

Victim Beaten Into Unconsciousness While Husband is Absent.

Columbiana county authorities today were searching for two unidentified men, who ransacked the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Myers, on the Millrock road, near Rogers, early Saturday afternoon, after brutally beating Mrs. Myers over the head with a poker. The robbers escaped with a diamond and pearl lavallier with a watch chain and a man's lodge ring.

Mrs. Myers was preparing to iron when the two men entered the kitchen and struck her over the head with a poker. While she was unconscious they searched the house. Three of the woman's children were asleep in the up-stairs of the house at the time of the assault and robbery. The fourth was with his mother but was not harmed by the strangers.

When Mrs. Myers regained consciousness an hour or more after the men had left the house, Sheriff Wright was notified. He hurried to the scene but could find no trace of the burglars. Neighbors reported having seen two men leaving the farm. The woman sustained a deep scalp wound as a result of the blow.

Her husband was working on a farm near Fairfield at the time of the attack.

The idea is all right, if anybody can be pursuaded to trade real money for the product of a lei printing machine.

MR. AVERESCU also plans to invite participation of American capital in the development of Rumania.

That country's chances of enlisting American support would be better had Rumania retained Bibesco as Rumanian minister at Washington. When Rumania lost Bibesco's services here, it lost one of the most popular and earnest of the foreign representatives.

And many Americans resent the abrupt withdrawal of a minister who was most welcome.

BAD news is the appearance of the Mexican cotton flea in several southern states. The government has warned cotton planters of the new danger, and will doubtless do more than issue warnings.

A menace to one of the nation's greatest sources of wealth threatens the whole country and is as much of the nation's business as the landing of an enemy army.

FARMERS of northern Louisiana meet the danger by engaging airplanes to dust the growing cotton with sulphur. Even in fighting insect life, the airplane is the only weapon.

Government should aid in that fight from the air and it really ought to take a serious interest in airplane production.

COMMANDER BYRD, first class American and first human being to fly over the north pole, told Wall Street men, who entertained him, that he once planned to try his luck in Wall Street. Only lack of cash held him back.

Many pale, thin ghosts that haunt New street and the back door of the stock exchange at night would advise Byrd to stick to the north pole—a much safter resort.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN asked Byrd, who called at his office, what the chances were for a branch bank at the pole. Byrd replied that Eskimos care nothing for money, the bank would have to deal in red beads. Mr. Morgan was not tempted.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER believes in seeing for himself. He has actually drilled and "brought in" in a good oil well inside the arctic. It is plugged up, held in reserve, waiting for better transportation facilities. You might call that foresight.

IT IS estimated that the United States will produce 710,000,000 barrels of oil this year, nearly seven barrels for every man, woman and child.

Oil variously used, represents power and efficiency. And civilization today depends on production of energy, apart from human labor, as in olden times it depended on slave labor before machinery was perfected.

Every barrel of oil, every horsepower of steam or electricity ought to mean greater freedom for human beings.

Ex-Secretary of War

direct descendant of Leonard Weeks, one of the New Hampshire pioneers.

In the hills of the Granite state, across the boundary line from Vermont where Calvin Coolidge was reared, there were instilled in him as a boy, the Yankee characteristics of shrewdness and common sense that enabled him to attain the pinacle of sucess.

A revered judge, the elder Weeks taught the future cabinet member at night, after the day's farm chores were done, and at the age of 17 John Wingate Weeks branched forth as a teacher in the district school.

Later, while attending Dartmouth college, Weeks grasped an opportunity to enter the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and served two years as a midshipman after graduating.

Engages in Brokerage Business.

At that time, however, the government had far more officers than ships and the number of commissions was cut down, Weeks returning to civilian life.

He then went to Florida and took a job running out lines of old Spanish grants. It was there that he met, wooed and married Miss Martha A. Sinclair, daughter of Charles A. Sinclair, partner of Frank Jones, famous brewer.

Shortly after, acting on a friend's "tip," Weeks came to Boston, and, although knowing nothing of the stock brokerage business, he managed to borrow enough money to buy a partnership in a firm that did a flourishing trade as Hornblower & Weeks.

Weeks served in the Spanish-American war as a captain in command of the second division, auxiliary United States naval force on the Atlantic coast, and at the time of his death today he was a reserve admiral in the navy.

It was in Newton, Mass., 26 years ago, that Weeks first tasted political He liked it, became a candidate for life, winning a contest for alderman, mayor, and was elected.

Smitten with political ambition, Weeks then launched a campaign for congress from the Twelfth district and he was elected to the fifty-ninth congress, serving right through to the sixty-third congress when he resigned to take his seat in the United States senate.

While still a senator, in 1916, Weeks was strongly in favor with certain elements in the Republican party for the presidential nomination that ultimately went to Charles Evans Hughes.

In 1919 he retired from the senate and devoted himself almost exclusively to his political party until his appointment to the cabinet by the late President Harding.

TOWN DESERTED AFTER BLAST

Mount Hope, N. J., Looks Like Place on War Front.

MOUNT HOPE, N. J., July 12. — This village, which lies in the shadow of Lake Denmark, N. J., scene of the terrific arsenal explosion, is as deserted as a town on the western front after an invasion.

The entire populace has departed. All that are here are newcomers—those on duty.

From a distance newspaper men and army officers peer cautiously over the edge of hills, below which lies a stretch of valley, pitted with shell holes exactly like those that flecked the battlefields of France.

Some of the holes are deep enough to allow four or five persons to stand without crowding.

Now and then shells were bursting upon this valley this morning smoke from a hundred burning spots drifted across the valley.

All was silent. Not a soul moved across this zone of danger. Trees were split. The grass was burned brown in huge spots. Remnants of shells that had exploded with heavy detonations were strewn about. Some of them still smouldering.

Durkin's Spurned Sweetheart Wed to "Boy Out of Job"

CHICAGO, July 12.—Betty Andrews Werner, the girl who Martin Durkin, bandit and killer, "left behind," today was on her honeymoon, with a surprise husband.

Scheduled to be married to Arthur Werner, father of her nameless child, Marty's abandoned sweetheart changed her mind and Saturday night became the bride of Clyde Whalen, 28, described by himself as a toilet goods salesman, but by his mother as "a boy out of a job."

Martha Kinsey, of Cincinnati, present state champion, made the course in 93.

Two Bandits Stage Triple Murder Near Spot in Cicero, Ill., Where Gangsters Killed "Hanging Prosecutor."

CHICAGO, July 12. — A Sunday school superintendent, his fiancee and a taxicab driver were shot and killed by two bandits in Cicero, West Chicago suburb, early today. The scene of the triple murder was within a stone's throw of the spot where several months ago Assistant State's Attorney William McSwiggin and two companions were shot to death.

One of the bandits was captured and is said to have confessed his part in the crime.

The dead are:

Fred Heine, 45, Sunday school superintendent of Salem Evangelical church.

Miss Marie Blang, 23, Heine's fiancee.

Ludwig Rose, 24, taxicab driver.

The couple were slain as they sat in an automobile in front of Miss Blang's home. Rose died in the county hospital three hours after the shooting. He said the bandit pair hired him and told him to drive to a certain address. When they neared the automobile occupied by Heine and Miss Blang they commanded him to stop.

They robbed Rose, stripped him of his uniform and attempted to take his car. When he objected they shot him through the stomach. He said he heard the shots that killed Heine and Miss Blang as he lay in the street a block away.

The captured bandit gave his name as Thomas McWain. He said he did not know his companion's name as they had met only four days before. He said the fugitive bandit did all the shooting.

"4—$100,000.00 appropriation to be used for the purpose of investigating and recovering, if possible, millions of dollars of the people's finances that have been lost, strayed or stolen since 1920, through incompetency and reckless disregard for the people's rights.

"5—Fifty per cent reduction in the number of state employes and a 25 per cent, salary increase for the remaining half, thereby securing competent help that can be held mentally and morally responsible for their official acts at a saving of millions of dollars for the taxpayers of Ohio.

"6—Favoring any legislation that will make the farmer and laborer more prosperous and comfortable, for the reason that if the farmer and laborer are prosperous, all other elements of society will not need to worry.

"7—Favoring higher wages and shorter hours for women working in factories or doing other laborious work.

"8—Abolition of the state pardon board and the enactment of a statute empowering the governor to appoint a local pardon board in each county of two members, one to be appointed from each of the two dominant political parties, thereby giving the poor man an equal opportunity with the rich for the benefit of clemency, which would place the matter in the hands of local men in each county who are in closer touch with the character of a convict seeking relief, thereby making it harder for the unworthy to be released and easier for those that are worthy."

Beatty spent the night here and left this morning for Cincinnati, where, he told newspaper men, he will speak at a mass meeting in Music hall tonight. He said he would return to East Liverpool Wednesday morning.

from entering the ruins because of this fact, and also because it is known that on the navy side of the arsenal there still is a big powder magazine which hasn't gone off, and that on the army side of the reservation are stored some 400 aerial bombs—the heaviest type of explosives known—as well as a considerable amount of T. N. T. and other explosives.

Thousands of curious sought to get close to the scene but were backed by state troopers. Traffic in all directions two miles from the scene was being diverted.

A field hospital has been established outside the zone of fire. Doctors and nurses from nearby cities and towns and from New York are busy taking care of the wounded.

LAKE DENMARK, N. J., July 12.—More explosions are feared today in the disaster of the naval ammunition depot here and the partial destruction of the army arsenal at Picatinny. Precautions have been taken to prevent a catastrophe at the army depot. Fires are still raging and may cause new detonations with further loss of human life.

Countryside is Rocked.

The first explosion occurred late Saturday and was followed by a series of blasts which rocked the countryside, turning the district into a No Man's Land.

If the wind changes its course it is feared the huge arsenal at Picatinny will be set ablaze from sparks drifting across the gully that separates the army and naval stations.

The first explosion occurred when a lightning bolt struck a quantity of ammunition at the navy base. A minute later there was another, and the from the depot that sheltered the depth bombs, weapons filled with TNT and stored for use against enemy submarines.

There was a terrific blast. A minute later there was nother, and the third came shortly after 8 o'clock. Bombs from the navy depot had found some of the army mazagines, and the shells were flying.

Windows were broken in an area 30 miles around. People believed that an earthquake had occurred.

3,000 Persons Homeless.

Groupes of marines were to explore the shattered countryside for the dead following teh arrival of five companies of the fifth regiment of marines from Quantico, Va. The detachment numbered 204 officers and men.

The marines arrived from the Virginia station on a special train. Carrying emergency rations and full war time equipment, they took over police duty at the wrecked naval post.

Scenes of horror are scattered in the wake of the terrific explosion that followed the destruction of a TNT magazine by lightning.

Relief among stricken civilians in the swept area, which covers 10 towns, is being pushed by the Red Cross and other agencies. More than 3,000 persons have been rendered homeless, it is estimated.

A field hospital has been established outside the zone of fire. Bursting of shells add to the task of assisting the thousands of refugees.

Six bodies were reported seen early today amid the shell craters and ruins by physicians in an advanced first aid post. The bodies wil be recovered as quickly as it is possible to penetrate the barrage.

Six Towns Deserted.

A state forest ranger from Morristown, who passed Lake Denmark, saw a charred body in the water. Three marines had been bathing in the lake just before the explosion and it is believed all perished.

Six towns are deserted. The desolation recalls the war-town villages in France. The towns are Marcella, Hibbernia, Longwood, Mud Lane, Mount Hope and Spicerstown. Mount Hope is a complete ruin and the property damage to the others is immense.

Roads in the vicinity of the swept district are patrolled by soldiers, sailors, marines and state troopers. Thousands of sightseers from a dozen states have flocked to the scene of the catastrophe. They are barred from close approach.

Inspection of the wrecked naval station was made by Secretary of War Davis.

He expressed his admiration of the assistance which had been rendered the stricken area by the officers of the New York and New Jersey police forces, not only immediately following the disaster, but since that time, in policing and regulating traffic on the roads.

"MISS NOBODY" AT AMERICAN

Anna Q. Nilsson is Seen in Unusual Role.

Anna Q. Nilsson is seen in one of the most unusual roles of her career in "Miss Nobody," now showing at the American theatre here.

The beautiful First National star takes the part of a hobo in "Miss Nobody." She wears mannish clothes throughout the major portion of the picture.

"Miss Nobody" is an adaptation of the celebrated Tiffany Well's novel, "Shebo," which achieved great success both in book and serial form. Shebo, as the heroine is called, disguises herself as a tramp in order to evade the unwelcome attentions of an admirer.

Lambert Hillyer, who directed "Miss Nobody," has made the episodes of tramp life quite authentic. Six genuine Knights of the Road were engaged by the director to act in the picture as well as to give expert advice.

The four principal male actors in "Miss Nobody" grew long beards for their parts in the picture. Walter Pidgeon, who plays opposite Miss Nilsson, grew the longest crop of whiskers, with Arthur Stone, Mitchell Lewis and Clyde Cooke close runners-up, or runners-down.

During the screening of "Miss Nobody" in one of the mountainous districts of California, Miss Nilsson narrowly escaped being bitten by a deadly rattlesnake, which prepared to strike at her as she rolled down a railway embankment.

The snake was killed, however, and now the star is wearing shoes made out of its skin.

Do You Believe You Can Be Thin And Healthy, Too?

Writer Says Folks Underweight Should Consider Question Seriously.

MAKES STARTLING STATEMENTS

Excessive thinness should not be confused with attractive and perfectly healthy slenderness. One does not need to be "fat" in order to be healthy—slenderness is not skinniness—but men and women of subnormal weight, who do not look or feel at their best, should honestly try to correct their weakness at once!

Those who treat the matter lightly or try to "laugh it off" by blaming their "thinness" on family characteristics are doing themselves a grave injustice and are seemingly blind to well-known facts.

Thinness invariably means Low Vitality—Low Vitality means a weakened condition and poor resistance—poor resistance means an easy prey (a waiting victim) for practically every disease that may come along. One does not need to be a Doctor to understand these things. Common Sense, observation and the fact that Life Insurance Companies absolutely refuse to sell Insurance to those who are "too thin" furnish convincing daily proofs—that one cannot be very much underweight and healthy, too!

Every day of delay increases the difficulty of best results from proper treatment—so, if you or any of your friends are excessively thin, don't wait, but start doing something about it at once. In the opinion of the writer, one of the best and simplest means of proper treatment is a few weeks' use of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. Tiny, tasteless tablets—containing the well known concentrated flesh-building value, the physical power and strength of Cod Livers—minus the offensive odor and terrible taste. A wonderful tonic and builder recommended and supplied by Carnahan's Drug Stores and all good druggists—60 tablets 60c—on a money back if not satisfied plan. Nearly 20 million McCoy's tablets sold last month, and wonderful reports of "gains in weight" received almost every day. Ask your druggist.

PLENTY OF ACTION ALWAYS ON TAP IN 101 RANCH WILD WEST

DAN DIX AND "VERGIL"

When Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Real Wild West and Great Far East comes to town Saturday, July 17, at the circus grounds at Columbian park, it will bring more than a thousand people and hundreds of horses, to say nothing of buffalo, elephants, camels, oxen, burros, ponies and longhorns, but "the thing it will have most of," to quote Octavius Roy Cohen, is action.

Nothing but action. In the Far East and the Cossack circus pagentry there will be beauty, and the two-mile street parade is colorful and picturesque, but action is the mainmost article with 101. Look at Ed Conroy, for instance. One minute before the camera clicked he was sitting atop "King Cole" eating cut plug. The cameraman asked for "a little action, please," and Ed started from where he is in the picture. The cameraman got plenty of action, and the crowds about got a thrill.

Below we see funny Dan Dix and his mule, "Vergil" the immovable. They have made thousands laugh daily.

How He Discovered Best Constipation Relief

Mr. Joseph F. Glus of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes "In the past 20 years I have been constantly troubled with constipation. Every remedy I tried would work O.K. for a while—but soon failed. The only remedy I have been able to use steadily with good results have been Carter's Little Liver Pills. I don't guess when I take them—I know I'm going to feel relieved." 25c at all druggists.

Do You Believe You Can Be Thin And Healthy, Too?

Writer Says Folks Underweight Should Consider Question Seriously.

MAKES STARTLING STATEMENTS

Excessive thinness should not be confused with attractive and perfectly healthy slenderness. One does not need to be "fat" in order to be healthy—slenderness is not skinniness—but men and women of subnormal weight, who do not look or feel at their best, should honestly try to correct their weakness at once!

Those who treat the matter lightly or try to "laugh it off" by blaming their "thinness" on family characteristics are doing themselves a grave injustice and are seemingly blind to well-known facts.

Thinness invariably means Low Vitality—Low Vitality means a weakened condition and poor resistance—poor resistance means an easy prey (a waiting victim) for practically every disease that may come along. One does not need to be a Doctor to understand these things. Common Sense, observation and the fact that Life Insurance Companies absolutely refuse to sell Insurance to those who are "too thin" furnish convincing daily proofs—that one cannot be very much underweight and healthy, too!

Every day of delay increases the difficulty of best results from proper treatment—so, if you or any of your friends are excessively thin, don't wait, but start doing something about it at once. In the opinion of the writer, one of the best and simplest means of proper treatment is a few weeks' use of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. Tiny, tasteless tablets—containing the well known concentrated flesh-building value, the physical power and strength of Cod Livers—minus the offensive odor and terrible taste. A wonderful tonic and builder recommended and supplied by Carnahan's Drug Stores and all good druggists—60 tablets 60c—on a money back if not satisfied plan. Nearly 20 million McCoy's tablets sold last month, and wonderful reports of "gains in weight" received almost every day. Ask your druggist.

How He Discovered Best Constipation Relief

Mr. Joseph F. Glus of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes "In the past 20 years I have been constantly troubled with constipation. Every remedy I tried would work O.K. for a while—but soon failed. The only remedy I have been able to use steadily with good results have been Carter's Little Liver Pills. I don't guess when I take them—I know I'm going to feel relieved." 25c at all druggists.

PLENTY OF ACTION ALWAYS ON TAP IN 101 RANCH WILD WEST

DAN DIX AND "VERGIL"

When Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Real Wild West and Great Far East comes to town Saturday, July 17, at the circus grounds at Columbian park, it will bring more than a thousand people and hundreds of horses, to say nothing of buffalo, elephants, camels, oxen, burros, ponies and longhorns, but "the thing it will have most of," to quote Octavius Roy Cohen, is action.

Nothing but action. In the Far East and the Cossack circus pagentry there will be beauty, and the two-mile street parade is colorful and picturesque, but action is the mainmost article with 101. Look at Ed Conroy, for instance. One minute before the camera clicked he was sitting atop "King Cole" eating cut plug. The cameraman asked for "a little action, please," and Ed started from where he is in the picture. The cameraman got plenty of action, and the crowds about got a thrill.

Below we see funny Dan Dix and his mule, "Vergil" the immovable. They have made thousands laugh daily.

PRO GRID LEAGUE ADOPTS 1926 SCHEDULE

OPEN CAMPAIGN SEPTEMBER 19

Los Angeles Combine is Given Franchise in Loop.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 12.—The National Football league, with 22 clubs in attendance and 50 delegates present, completed a two-day session here with adoption of the 1926 schedule.

Opening games are listed for Sept. 19. The season will close on Dec. 17. Opening games are: Akron at Philadelphia; Columbus at Canton, Ohio; Chicago Bears at Green Bay, Wis.; Brooklyn at Providence, R. I.; Hammond, Indiana, at Race, Wis.; Detroit at Milwaukee.

A franchise was issued to the Los Angeles Football corporation, backed by moving picture interests of the west.

The club will be composed of leading western college stars and they will play all their early games away from home. They will play every week and at the close of the season a number of the foremost clubs in the east and middle west will go to the coast for games there.

Racine Reinstated.

The Racine team, inactive last year, applied for reinstatement and was granted an active franchise for this season. The Pottsville club, which won the championship in 1925 only to have it forfeited for playing a game in Philadelphia with a team known as the Four Horsemen when Frankford was scheduled, was reinstated after Dr. J. K. Striegel paid a fine of $2,500 imposed by Joseph H. Carr, president of the league.

Another new club taken into the fold was Brooklyn. This club will be managed by Edward W. Butler, quarterback and captain of the 1912 Cornell team. The Hartford, Connecticut, Blues with James Mulligan at the head were also granted membership, while the New Britain team withdrew. Cleveland and Minneapolis asked permission to withdraw, which was granted.

Carr made a strong plea to the league to adhere to the rule passed recently providing that no college player be signed by any team until he has graduated.

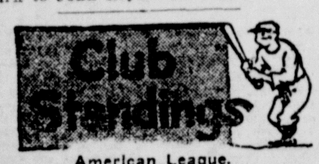

Co-Operate With Colleges.

In order that a clearer understanding with colleges may be had a committee was appointed to confer with Brigadier General Palmer A. Pierce, president of the Intercollegiate Athletic Union, in New York today.

The committee consists of Judge James J. Dooley, Providence; George Halas, Chicago; Dr. Harry A. March, New York, and C. B. Coffin, of Providence, R. I.

Many former college stars have been signed by teams in the league, but the clubs desire to keep their identity secret for some time for various reasons. It was announced, however, that Ernie Nevers, All-American fullback of California, will have charge of the Duluth club, to be known as Nevers' Eskimos.

The league accepted the new forward pass rule. A transfer of the Milwaukee franchise from A. L. McBurk to John Bryan was approved.

K. OF C. TOSSERS SEEKING GAMES

Manager Joseph McKenna, of the Knights of Columbus baseball club, today issued a challenge to amateur teams in the East Liverpool district for games during the remainder of July and early August.

The Knights defeated the West End Merchants, 8 to 6, at Patterson Field last Wednesday night, and took the Dixonville nine into camp by the same score on the Dixonville field Friday night.

Newer Champs Can Revive Boxing Game If They Choose

Of recent days two new faces have bobbed up in the ranks of the boxing ring champions—Pete Latzo and Sammy Mandell.

These men bear major championship honors. Latzo wears the welterweight crown he knocked from the head of Mickey Walker. Mandell gave the venerable Rocky Kansas his final boxing lesson and wrested the world's lightweight crown from his graying head.

These two newly crowned kings, along with the only other two who are active, hold it within their power to bring to fistic fandom a new era in boxing—or rather a return to the old era.

By the mighty power of their rights and the cunning of their lefts they can bring the game back to a place of prestige and bring it back to the man on the street.

Latzo Keeps Busy.

Latzo has already started his one-man campaign to do this. He has already defended his title thrice and is accepting more matches, large and small, naming no opponents or referees. His last victory was a four-round decision on a foul over George Levine.

Sammy Mandell, after a well deserved honeymoon in the east, will defend his newly won crown, according to Eddie Kane. The fans want to see both of these fighters. They're young, willing to fight, and popular.

Paul Berlenbach has been fighting a one-man warfare for months to put boxing on a fighting basis. Ever since he won the somewhat dusty and dented light heavyweight championship from Mike McTigue, Berlenbach has walked around with a chip on one shoulder and a chip on the other. He risked his title recently against one of the most talked of, if not one of the toughest eggs, in the division when he met Young Stribling—and proceeded to give him a few lessons in socking. And the wires hadn't finished peddling the yarns of that fight when he agreed to meet Jack Delaney again this month.

Kaplan Uses Convincing Fists.

Louis Kid Kaplan didn't convince the entire world he was a real champ when he defeated Danny Kramer in their match, following the abdication of Johnny Dundee, without a struggle. But that didn't bother Kaplan. He started in defending whatever part of the title you gave him credit for and kept busy at it until he resigned the title. Now he's a lightweight possibility.

Great Walter Hagen Not Slipping; Bobby Is Simply Getting Better

Class Tells as Jones, Despite Staleness and Burden of Overgolfing, Wins Open Laurels.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The popular belief that Bobby Jones is the greatest golfer that ever lived doesn't require my confirmation today, some thirty hours after he won his third major title, the national open championship, at Scioto. All I can do is enhance the young man's greatness with the remark that Bobby was stale and over-golfed at Columbus, a fact that he freely conceded before, during and after the tournament.

Yet he won from all the great ones, including Hagen, Diegel, Sarazen, Mac Smith, Mahlhorn, Evans, Farrell, and others who neither were supposed to be over-golfed nor burdened by the riches of notoriety that inevitably follows the winning of a great championship like the British open.

Hits Stride on Last Lap.

Jones was hitting his shots at Scioto only on the final nine holes that won him the title. The 70 he got for the first eighteen holes he said, simply came unasked. He didn't, in other words, consider that he was playing good golf just because he happened to be scoring well.

Jones is neither a braggart nor an alibi man. Therefore, the inference is clear that, had he played typical golf around the "bloody hayfield" he would have made a competitive travesty of the championship.

As it was, even that misfit second round of 79 didn't prevent him from increasing his lead in total strokes over Walter Hagen for the eight championships in which both have been started. He now has twenty-six strokes on the bland Mr. Hagen, or an average of three and one quarter strokes for each tournament.

Hagen as Good as Ever.

Some, in accounting for Jones' obvious superiority at the moment, seem inclined to suggest that Walter has seen better days. They are quite wrong. Walter Hagen is just as good as he ever was—a man who overcomes a tendency toward wildness with his truly amazing "money shots" and a great competitive soul. The real answer is that Bobby Jones, getting better with each passing year, has gone beyond Hagen.

Whether he will be able to make the thing unanimous by winning the national amateur at Baltusrol in September is a matter best left to the tender mercies of psychologists and "percentage players." The latter say that Bobby hasn't a chance, simply because golf history and the law of averages are against any man winning the national amateur title for three straight years, particularly after running through the British and American open fields.

The only thing the matter with that argument is that percentage figuring doesn't apply to a golfer like Bobby Jones any more than a shoe horn applies to a neck.

The Braves went berserk and slaughtered the Cardinals, 19 to 5, after dropping the opening game of a double-header, 7 to 2. The Braves collected 23 hits in the nightcap, which marked their first victory over the Cards after 10 straight defeats.

INSIDE Ggolf

By CHESTER HORTON.

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

There is no one absolutely fixed way for the golf swing. Some good pros teach that the first thing to do is break the clubhead directly back from the ball with the wrists. That is Jock Hutchinson's method — one of the soundest of golfers who is remarkably successful as an instructor, an unusual achievement. And to prove that other methods are not Americanizations of the game we have George Duncan, as Scotch as Carnoustie, who drags the clubhead back, away behind his hands, until his arms, when about midway back with the club, find his left wrist almost directly under his right forearm. Hutchinson's wrist action is more modern and it perhaps is somewhat easier for the average player to hit the ball with Hutchinson's method. This, after all, has to be the primary object of the teacher—the pupil wants to hit it. While the one method is easier I think the other is sounder.

SKULL PRACTICE

Four "best dressed" golfers at the recent national open tourney are going to receive their clothes free from a clothing concern for a year. Who said clothes didn't make the man?

Hank Gowdy thanked Minneapolis fans for their "Gowdy Day" recently by socking a homer, double and single and nipping three attempted steals. And the big league moguls who were going to "take care of Hank" because of his war service, tried to skip that paragaraph in the day's news.

Babe Ruth is a dozen games behing his 1921 record in knocking home runs. But that doesn't make the remaining weeks any brighter for the pitchers.

Milwaukee has a new shortstop star in Flippen and the bugs flock to the park just to see him Flippen about.

INTER-CLUB TILT SATURDAY

Local Golfers Practice for Steubenville Match.

With an extra week to get in trim before their first inter-club match of the season, local golfers will negotiate a few extra practice rounds between now and next Saturday when they will play the Steubenville Country club team here in the first of two matches.

The clash originally was billed for last Saturday, but with a number of members of both the local and the Steubenville team in Columbus for the national open finals, it was postponed a week.

The return tilt will be staged on August 7 at Steubenville.

An old pal foursome, to have been played next Saturday and moved ahead one week, took the place of the inter-club matches in week-end golf activities here.

The foursome was won by Mrs. C. H. Walker and Edwin Wells, Jr., with a best ball card of 70.

Honors in the sweepstakes were captured by Arthur A. Wells, with a score of 78.

WOMEN'S GOLF MEET LAUNCHED

TOLEDO, O., July 12.—With fifty contestants entered, representing the winning golfers from all parts of the state, the annual Ohio women's golf championship tournament was opened at 9 a. m. today at the Inverness course here when the players teed off in the first qualifying round of 18 holes. The day was ideal for golfing.

Cleveland has entered 17 contestants; Toledo 22; Cincinnati 3; Tiffin 4; while individual players are listed from Youngstown, Springfield, Dayton, Columbus and Zanesville.

Miss Martha Kinsey of Cincinnati, present state champion is again entered as is Miss Louise Fordyce, the sensational Youngstown player.

The sixteen players with the lowest scores in the qualifying round will enter championship matches. Play will continue each morning until Friday.

Will Give Virginian 'Big Shot' In Twelve Rounds to Decision

Latzo, Defending Crown Third Time in 18 Days, to Trade Punches With Ted Nelson, Richmond, Va., Pug Friday Night at North End Ball Park.

STEUBENVILLE, July 12. — This city next Friday night, July 16, makes its first bid for prominence as a "fight town" when Pete Latzo, the Scranton, Pa., coal miner, and welterweight champion of the world, defends his crown in a 12-round decision bout with Ted Nelson, Richmond, Va., at the North End Ball Park.

The big fistic event, the first outdoor ring show Steubenville has had in 50 years, the first big fight it ever had and the first title bout staged in Ohio since Britton won welter laurels from Lewis at Canton, is being promoted by the American Legion and the Steubenville Athletic Association, headed by James H. Gill, wealthy clay manufacturer and sportsman.

Mike McKinney, the former Canton promoter who staged the Britton-Lewis fight, is doing the matchmaking for the big show here.

It will make the third time in 18 days that Latzo has defended his crown and Nelson expects to give him a harder battle than did Willie Harmon and Georgie Levin. Nelson is a welter from Europe who is now fighting out of Richmond, Va., under the direction of Charles Rose, prominent New York manager.

Nelson completed ten days of hard work at a farm near his home city and then went to New York where he is completing his training grind. Paul Berlenbach and Mike McTigue are numbered among his sparring partners.

Both fighters and their handlers are expected to arrive here Thursday morning.

The semi-final of the big show looms as a battle of main bout calibre. It brings together Tommy Crowley, Pittsburgh who is regarded as the best boy the Smoky City has produced since the Zivics, and Jimmy Perry, Alliance's new featherweight sensation.

The referee for the battle will be agreed upon by Paddy Mullins, pilot of the champ, and Rose. Three prominent officials are being considered. They are Eddie Davis, Tommy McGinty and Matt Hinkle.

The profits of the show will go into the Police and Firemen's pension funds.

Whether he will be able to make the thing unanimous by winning the national amateur at Baltusrol in September is a matter best left to the tender mercies of psychologists and "percentage players." The latter say that Bobby hasn't a chance, simply because golf history and the law of averages are against any man winning the national amateur title for three straight years, particularly after running through the British and American open fields.

The only thing the matter with that argument is that percentage figuring doesn't apply to a golfer like Bobby Jones any more than a shoe horn applies to a neck.

The Braves went berserk and slaughtered the Cardinals, 19 to 5, after dropping the opening game of a double-header, 7 to 2. The Braves collected 23 hits in the nightcap, which marked their first victory over the Cards after 10 straight defeats.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON.

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

There is no one absolutely fixed way for the golf swing. Some good pros teach that the first thing to do is break the clubhead directly back from the ball with the wrists. That is Jock Hutchinson's method — one of the soundest of golfers who is remarkably successful as an instructor, an unusual achievement. And to prove that other methods are not Americanizations of the game we have George Duncan, as Scotch as Carnoustie, who drags the clubhead back, away behind his hands, until his arms, when about midway back with the club, find his left wrist almost directly under his right forearm. Hutchinson's wrist action is more modern and it perhaps is somewhat easier for the average player to hit the ball with Hutchinson's method. This, after all, has to be the primary object of the teacher—the pupil wants to hit it. While the one method is easier I think the other is sounder.

Of recent days two new faces have bobbed up in the ranks of the boxing ring champions—Pete Latzo and Sammy Mandell.

These men bear major championship honors. Latzo wears the welterweight crown he knocked from the head of Mickey Walker. Mandell gave the venerable Rocky Kansas his final boxing lesson and wrested the world's lightweight crown from his graying head.

These two newly crowned kings, along with the only other two who are active, hold it within their power to bring to fistic fandom a new era in boxing—or rather a return to the old era.

By the mighty power of their rights and the cunning of their lefts they can bring the game back to a place of prestige and bring it back to the man on the street.

Latzo Keeps Busy.

Latzo has already started his one-man campaign to do this. He has already defended his title thrice and is accepting more matches, large and small, naming no opponents or referees. His last victory was a four-round decision on a foul over George Levine.

Sammy Mandell, after a well deserved honeymoon in the east, will defend his newly won crown, according to Eddie Kane. The fans want to see both of these fighters. They're young, willing to fight, and popular.

Paul Berlenbach has been fighting a one-man warfare for months to put boxing on a fighting basis. Ever since he won the somewhat dusty and dented light heavyweight championship from Mike McTigue, Berlenbach has walked around with it on one shoulder and a chip on the other. He risked his title recently against one of the most talked of, if not one of the toughest eggs, in the division when he met Young Stribling—and proceeded to give him a few lessons in socking. And the wires hadn't finished peddling the yarns of that fight when he agreed to meet Jack Delaney again this month.

Kaplan Uses Convincing Fists.

Louis Kid Kaplan didn't convince the entire world he was a real champ when he defeated Danny Kramer in their match, following the abdication of Johnny Dundee, without a struggle. But that didn't bother Kaplan. He started in defending whatever part of the title you gave him credit for and kept busy at it until he resigned the title. Now he's a lightweight possibility.

SKULL PRACTICE

Four "best dressed" golfers at the recent national open tourney are going to receive their clothes free from a clothing concern for a year. Who said clothes didn't make the man?

Hank Gowdy thanked Minneapolis fans for their "Gowdy Day" recently by socking a homer, double and single and nipping three attempted steals. And the big league moguls who were going to "take care of Hank" because of his war service, tried to skip that paragaraph in the day's news.

Babe Ruth is a dozen games behing his 1921 record in knocking home runs. But that doesn't make the remaining weeks any brighter for the pitchers.

Milwaukee has a new shortstop star in Flippen and the bugs flock to the park just to see him Flippen about.

INTER-CLUB TILT SATURDAY

Local Golfers Practice for Steubenville Match.

With an extra week to get in trim before their first inter-club match of the season, local golfers will negotiate a few extra practice rounds between now and next Saturday when they will play the Steubenville Country club team here in the first of two matches.

The clash originally was billed for last Saturday, but with a number of members of both the local and the Steubenville team in Columbus for the national open finals, it was postponed a week.

The return tilt will be staged on August 7 at Steubenville.

An old pal foursome, to have been played next Saturday and moved ahead one week, took the place of the inter-club matches in week-end golf activities here.

The foursome was won by Mrs. C. H. Walker and Edwin Wells, Jr., with a best ball card of 70.

Honors in the sweepstakes were captured by Arthur A. Wells, with a score of 78.

WOMEN'S GOLF MEET LAUNCHED

TOLEDO, O., July 12.—With fifty contestants entered, representing the winning golfers from all parts of the state, the annual Ohio women's golf championship tournament was opened at 9 a. m. today at the Inverness course here when the players teed off in the first qualifying round of 18 holes. The day was ideal for golfing.

Cleveland has entered 17 contestants; Toledo 22; Cincinnati 3; Tiffin 4; while individual players are listed from Youngstown, Springfield, Dayton, Columbus and Zanesville.

Miss Martha Kinsey of Cincinnati, present state champion is again entered as is Miss Louise Ferdyce, the sensational Youngstown player.

The sixteen players with the lowest scores in the qualifying round will enter championship matches. Play will continue each morning until Friday.

Will Give Virginian 'Big Shot' In Twelve Rounds to Decision

Latzo, Defending Crown Third Time in 18 Days, to Trade Punches With Ted Nelson, Richmond, Va., Pug Friday Night at North End Ball Park.

STEUBENVILLE, July 12. — This city next Friday night, July 16, makes its first bid for prominence as a "fight town" when Pete Latzo, the Scranton, Pa., coal miner, and welterweight champion of the world, defends his crown in a 12-round decision bout with Ted Nelson, Richmond, Va., at the North End Ball Park.

The big fistic event, the first outdoor ring show Steubenville has had in 50 years, the first big fight it ever had and the first title bout staged in Ohio since Britton won welter laurels from Lewis at Canton, is being promoted by the American Legion and the Steubenville Athletic Association, headed by James H. Gill, wealthy clay manufacturer and sportsman.

Mike McKinney, the former Canton promoter who staged the Britton-Lewis fight, is doing the matchmaking for the big show here.

It will make the third time in 18 days that Latzo has defended his crown and Nelson expects to give him a harder battle than did Willie Harmon and Georgie Levin. Nelson is a welter from Europe who is now fighting out of Richmond, Va., under the direction of Charles Rose, prominent New York manager.

Nelson completed ten days of hard work at a farm near his home city and then went to New York where he is completing his training grind. Paul Berlenbach and Mike McTigue are numbered among his sparring partners.

Both fighters and their handlers are expected to arrive here Thursday morning.

The semi-final of the big show looms as a battle of main bout calibre. It brings together Tommy Crowley, Pittsburgh who is regarded as the best boy the Smoky City has produced since the Zivics, and Jimmy Perry, Alliance's new featherweight sensation.

The referee for the battle will be agreed upon by Paddy Mullins, pilot of the champ, and Rose. Three prominent officials are being considered. They are Eddie Davis, Tommy McGinty and Matt Hinkle.

The profits of the show will go into the Police and Firemen's pension funds.

Haskin's Letter

their weekly or monthly housing expense.

In a London suburb, less than ten miles from Charing Cross, model houses, semi-detached, situated in the middle of open spaces, and each with its garden, may be secured for $5 a week. Try to get a proposition like that within ten miles of the City Hall in New York, or in the suburbs of any American city! These London houses, it may be added, are of six to eight rooms, and with what the real estate people in this country designate in their advertisements as "a. m. i." While they may not have exactly what goes for "all modern improvements" in the United States they at least have baths.

Two families, each of three members, with practically the same income, live, one a half-hour from Wall Street, in New York, and the other, a half-hour from Charing Cross, London. They compared their housing costs. The Englishman's rent was $24 a month, to which he added $5 a month for heat. The American's rent, including heat, was $150 a month— a shade more than five times what the Englishman paid—and he had only a small apartment while the Englishman had a semi-detached house and a garden.

And, just to make the comparison of housing costs impressive, be it noted that in the country in many parts of England there are small stone houses, of two stories, each with a small garden, that may be rented for the equivalent of 75 cents a week! Before the World War they rented for 50 cents a week. Sleeping quarters on a park bench cost more than that in the United States.

Food Costs Much Lower.

Difference in food costs between the two countries is not so great as the difference in housing costs, but the Englishman has an advantage in providing for his table that will amount to a considerable item in the course of a year. He will pay from ten to fifteen per cent less for his meat, a third less for fish, a half less for potatoes, cabbage, lettuce, and other vegetables, 40 per cent less for butter, and 20 per cent less for cream. His eggs will cost him almost as much as they cost in this country, but even there he will save for or five cents on the dozen.

A few New York and London prices that are cited show beef at 44 cents here and 40 over there; fish, 36 cents and 24; bread, 9 cents and 5; butter, 84 cents and 52; eggs 46 and 42; and as strawberries were in season when the comparison was made it was found that the delectable fruit cost 24 cents a box in New York when it was selling for 12 cents in London.

The two families of three members each, referred to in connection with the rental comparison, also made a comparison of their food budgets. That there were excellent huswives in both families is evidenced by their expenditures. For food and laundry the American family in New York spent $21 a week, while the weekly bill in London was $11. There was a grown son in each family and in neither case was the cost of the luncheons for the men included.

It is not only the working people who have the benefit of low living costs in England. In fact, it is stated that the professional man whose income of from 800 to 900 pounds a year —$4000 to $5000—has relatively a much greater advantage over his colleague in this country with a similar income. The Englishman will own his own home, as a rule, but if he doesn't his rental will not exceed $10 a week. The maid who assists in running the establishment will be delighted with a wage of $150 a year. The family will be able to entertain frequently, go to the theater, and maintain a small car, as luxuries, and will save money every year. No American family can live on such a scale on a similar income and save money.

In the matter of automobiles it is recognized that Americans have a great advantage. Family incomes here make owning of a car possible to families that similarly situated in England could not even think of such extravagance. And the British worker who came over here and visited a large manufacturing plant where a majority of the employees drove up every morning in their own cars would probably require the services of a physician to assist him from recovering from the shock.

Haskin's Letter

their weekly or monthly housing expense.

In a London suburb, less than ten miles from Charing Cross, model houses, semi-detached, situated in the middle of open spaces, and each with its garden, may be secured for $5 a week. Try to get a proposition like that within ten miles of the City Hall in New York, or in the suburbs of any American city! These London houses, it may be added, are of six to eight rooms, and with what the real estate people in this country designate in their advertisements as "a. m. i." While they may not have exactly what goes for "all modern improvements" in the United States they at least have baths.

Two families, each of three members, with practically the same income, live, one a half-hour from Wall Street, in New York, and the other, a half-hour from Charing Cross, London. They compared their housing costs. The Englishman's rent was $24 a month, to which he added $5 a month for heat. The American's rent, including heat, was $150 a month—a shade more than five times what the Englishman paid—and he had only a small apartment while the Englishman had a semi-detached house and a garden.

And, just to make the comparison of housing costs impressive, be it noted that in the country in many parts of England there are small stone houses, of two stories, each with a small garden, that may be rented for the equivalent of 75 cents a week! Before the World War they rented for 50 cents a week. Sleeping quarters on a park bench cost more than that in the United States.

Food Costs Much Lower.

Difference in food costs between the two countries is not so great as the difference in housing costs, but the Englishman has an advantage in providing for his table that will amount to a considerable item in the course of a year. He will pay from ten to fifteen per cent less for his meat, a third less for fish, a half less for potatoes, cabbage, lettuce, and other vegetables, 40 per cent less for butter, and 20 per cent less for cream. His eggs will cost him almost as much as they cost in this country, but even there he will save for or five cents on the dozen.

A few New York and London prices that are cited show beef at 44 cents here and 40 over there; fish, 36 cents and 24; bread, 9 cents and 5; butter, 84 cents and 52; eggs 46 and 42; and as strawberries were in season when the comparison was made it was found that the delectable fruit cost 24 cents a box in New York when it was selling for 12 cents in London.

The two families of three members each, referred to in connection with the rental comparison, also made a comparison of their food budgets. That there were excellent huswives in both families is evidenced by their expenditures. For food and laundry the American family in New York spent $21 a week, while the weekly bill in London was $11. There was a grown son in each family and in neither case was the cost of the luncheons for the men included.

It is not only the working people who have the benefit of low living costs in England. In fact, it is stated that the professional man whose income of from 800 to 900 pounds a year—$4000 to $5000—has relatively a much greater advantage over his colleague in this country with a similar income. The Englishman will own his own home, as a rule, but if he doesn't his rental will not exceed $10 a week. The maid who assists in running the establishment will be delighted with a wage of $150 a year. The family will be able to entertain frequently, go to the theater, and maintain a small car, as luxuries, and will save money every year. No American family can live on such a scale on a similar income and save money.

In the matter of automobiles it is recognized that Americans have a great advantage. Family incomes here make owning of a car possible to families that similarly situated in England could not even think of such extravagance. And the British worker who came over here and visited a large manufacturing plant where a majority of the employees drove up every morning in their own cars would probably require the services of a physician to assist him from recovering from the shock.

CABELL LEADS IN FIRE LOSSES

Fire Marshal Topping's Figures Show Decrease in Past Year.

West Virginia's total loss by fire for the fiscal year ending June 30 was $6,246,563 as compared with $6,588,529 for the year preceding, according to the annual report of Fire Marshal Topping just issued. The decrease amounted to $341,968 or five per cent.

There were 1,219 fires reported to the fire marshal department the last fiscal year, and in 586 of these the loss was entire and in 633 partial. The sound value of the property involved was $14,681,132 and insurance $10,175,552.

While the fire waste in the state was not so great last year, the sacrifice of life, mostly from preventable fire, was appalling. Ninety-one deaths were reported and a large percentage of the victims were children. Other accidents from fire numbered 113.

Cabell led the counties last year with a loss of $876,690, Ohio county was second with a loss of $441,787, and Kanawha county third with a loss of $398,755.

The department during the year made 1,092 inspections, issued 92 orders, investigated 72 suspicious fires and secured 59 indictments and 14 convictions for arson.

The year's fires included 675 dwellings, 174 stores, 52 barns, 58 garages, 41 manufactories, 26 warehouses, 21 hotels, 20 school houses, 19 restaurants, 16 sheds, 14 shops, 12 automobiles, 12 club and lodge rooms, 9 churches, 8 offices, 7 flats, 7 bakeries, 7 dry cleaners, 6 apartment houses, 7 coal tipples, 3 laundries, 2 motion picture theatres, 2 tool houses and a bank.

Of the 1,219 fires, 522 were unknown, 39 of incendiary and 33 of suspicious origin; 181 caught from adjoining premises, 97 from defective flues, 54 from defective electric wires and six from electric irons. Gasoline explosions caused 24 fires, gas explosions 18 and gas jets 15. Fourteen unroofed buildings were struck by lightning. Carelessness with matches was responsible for 16 fires and smokers' carelessness for 18. Twelve fires were due to explosion of kerosene lamps and stoves and 77 to ignition of woodwork from stoves and other heaters. Burning rubbish and children playing with fire caused 24 of the blazes.

The fire marshal's report for last month shows a marked decrease in fire losses, the total for the month reported being $169,61, or 72 per cent less than in June, 1926.
